

THE HISTORY OF INDIA

RAJASTHAN UNIVERSITY LIBRARY
DATE LABEL

THE POSTHUMOUS PAPERS
OF THE LATE
SIR H M ELLIOT

Edited by Prof John Dowson

SUSIL GUPTA (INDIA) LTD
CALCUTTA

First Edition 1875
Second Edition 1953

Published by S Gupta for Susil Gupta (India) Ltd, 35 Central Avenue, Calcutta 12, and Printed by M Mukerjee from Temple Press, 2, Naraina Lane, Calcutta 4

AKBAR-NAMA
OF
SHAIKH ABU-L FAZL

PUBLISHERS' NOTE

This volume comprises the first three articles, namely, Akbar-nama, of Shaikh Abu-l Fazl, Takmila-i Akbar Nama, of 'Inayatu-lla and Akbar-nama, of Shaikh Illahdad Faizı Sirhindı, which appeared in the Sixth Volume of the original edition of this work. As their titles indicate, they all deal with the reign of Akbar which will be brought to a close in the next volume.

In the course of his prefatory remarks the Editor of the original work writes as follows —

“Copious Extracts have been drawn from the great Akbar nama of Abu-l Fazl, a work as yet but little known to the reader except by vague reputation. Some Extracts relating to the closing years of Akbar's reign have also been taken from the continuation of the Akbar-nama by Inayatu-lla. Another and smaller Akbar-nama by Shaikh Illahdad, otherwise called Faizı Sirhindı, has also been laid under contribution, but it does not fulfil the expectations which had been formed of it, as it proves to be little more than a compilation from the Tabakat-i Akbari and the greater work of Abu-l Fazl.”

Akbar-nama of Abu-l Fazl was translated by the Editor himself. Takmila-i Akbar nama was from the pen of “Lieutenant” Chalmers. The concluding one, namely, Akbar-nama of Faizı Sirhindı was translated by the Editor and “Ensign” E. Mackenzie.

CONTENTS

	PAGE
1 Akbar-Nama of Abu-l Fazl	1
2 Reign of the Emperor Humayun	9
3 Humayun's March to Bengal	19
4 Sher Shah occupies Bengal	20
5 Reign of the Emperor Akbar	21
6 Fall of Bairam Khan	24
7 Affairs of Bengal	41
8 Revolt in Bengal	47
9 Third Conquest of Bengal	69
10 Burning of Widows	72
11 Rebels in Bengal	82
12 Pacification of Bengal	84
13 Conquest of Birar	89
14 Conquest of Orissa	93
15 Death of Prince Sultan Murad	103
16 Takmilat-i Akbar-nama of Inayatu-lla	109
17 Death of Abu-l Fazl	112
18 Death of the Emperor's Mother	119
19 Death of Prince Daniyal	120
20 Death of the Emperor	121
21 Akbar nama of Faizi Sirhindi	122

ABUL FAZL 'ALLAMI WAS THE SON OF SHAIKH MUBARAK, son of Shaikh Khizr, who emigrated from Sind to Hindustan. Shaikh Mubarak was born at Nagor, and at an early age gave evidence of great intellectual powers. He became one of the most learned men of the time, and was conspicuous during the reign of Akbar for his great erudition and his liberal opinions on religious matters. He had several sons, two of whom rose to the greatest eminence and celebrity. The eldest, Shaikh Abul Faiz, better known as Faizi was the most popular poet of the time. He was a great favourite and the constant companion of Akbar who gave him the title of "Prince of Poets." His compositions are still held in very high estimation as second only to those of Amir Khusrū the acknowledged chief of Indian poets.

Abul Faiz was the second son and was born on the 14th January 1551. He was educated under his father's care, and was a devoted student. His range of reading was extensive and before the age of twenty he had obtained the reputation of being a deep and critical scholar. His attainments afterwards gained for him the high-sounding title of 'Allamī. Faizi's poems early attracted the attention of the Emperor, who invited the young poet to his Court while he was engaged in the siege of Chitor, in the twelfth year of the reign. Faizi soon became an established favourite, and enjoyed great influence. By his means Abu-l Faiz was introduced at Court in his seventeenth year. His abilities were immediately recognized, and every year he grew in favour and in power until he rose to the office of Prime Minister, and became a mansabdar of 4,000. In the position of courtier and minister he enjoyed the unbounded confidence of the Emperor, and he discharged his duties, both as a civilian and a soldier, with distinguished ability and success. In the following pages some passages will be found relating to his services in the Dakhin, and an incident connected with the siege of Asir deserves to be recorded here to his honour. Bahadur Khan, the holder of this fortress, was desirous of gaining the favour of Abul Fazl, hoping by his influence to avert the Emperor's displeasure. He therefore sent him some rich presents. Abu-l Fazl returned the presents with the following statement: "I have made a vow not to accept presents till four conditions are fulfilled: 1. Friendship, 2. That I should not value the gift too highly, 3. That I should not have been anxious to get a present, 4. Necessity to accept it. Now, supposing that the first three are satisfied in the present case, the favour of the Emperor has extinguished every desire in me of accepting gifts from others."

Both Faizi and Abul Fazl imbibed the liberal opinions of their father, and carried them to greater extremes. They were reviled by the faithful as heterodox, as apostates, as heretics, as free thinkers, as perverters of the truth and deceivers of the faithful. Akbar's tolerance, his early doubts, and his inquiries into the principles of other religions, had shown themselves before the brothers were introduced at Court. But if they did not kindle the fire, they fanned it and kept it alive. In them the Emperor found congenial minds, with feelings and opinions similar to but more decided than his own. With them he held frequent converse, and indulged his partiality for theological discussion, the result was that he and they, mutually influencing each other, progressed through various phases of scepticism and credulity, until they finally arrived at the rejection of Islam, and the establishment of the "Divine Faith," described as "Divine Monotheism." At the head of this new religion stood Akbar himself, next after him came Abu-l Fazl and Faizi.

Prince Salim, afterwards the Emperor Jahangir, had a great dislike of Abul Fazl. The minister served his master too faithfully, and thwarted the ambitious views of the heir so successfully, as to make himself an object of hatred. 'He was no friend of mine,' wrote Jahangir in his Memoirs, and he took an opportunity to remove the man he served and hated. The Prince had more than once shown signs of rebellion, and of an intention to assume independence. In the forty-seventh year of his father's reign his ambitious designs displayed themselves more distinctly, and excited much distrust in the mind of the Emperor. At this time Abul Fazl was in command in the Dakhn, and Akbar desiring the support and counsel of his trusty minister, sent him an urgent recall. Abu-l Fazl obeyed the summons immediately, and set out for Agra with only a slender escort. This afforded the opportunity for making an end of him. A Bundela Raja, named Bir Singh, was incited by the Prince to waylay the minister and kill him. Abu-l Fazl had warning of his danger but refused to turn aside. On Friday, the 4th Rabi-ul awwal (12th August 1602), he was attacked by the Bundela about six kos from Narwar, and after a short but gallant resistance he fell dead, and his head was sent as an acceptable offering to the Prince. Early in the reign of Jahangir, the murderer received high promotion, and Jahangir in his Memoirs avows and justifies his having procured the murder by promise of reward. Akbar's grief at the death of his minister was unbounded, and he took active measures to bring Bir Singh to punishment. The murderer was hunted from place to place and had several hair-breadth escapes, but the death of the Emperor put an end to his danger, and opened the road to reward and honour.

The author of the Ma-asiru'l Umara writes as follows in his Memoirs

"It has often been asserted that Abul Fazl was an infidel Some say he was a Hindu, or a fire-worshipper, or a free thinker, and some go still further and call him an atheist, but others pass a juster sentence, and say that he was a pantheist, and that, like other Sufis, he claimed for himself a position above the law of the Prophet. There is no doubt that he was a man of lofty character, and desired to live at peace with all men He never said anything improper Abuse, stoppages of wages, fines, absence on the part of his servants, did not exist in his household If he appointed a man whom he afterwards found to be useless, he did not remove him, but kept him as long as he could, for he used to say that, if he dismissed him, people would accuse him of want of penetration in having appointed an unsuitable agent. On the day when the sun entered Aries, he inspected his whole household and took stock, keeping the inventory with himself, and burning last year's books He also gave his whole wardrobe to his servants, with the exception of his trousers, which were burnt in his presence

"He had an extraordinary appetite It is said that, exclusive of water and soup, he consumed daily twenty-two sirs of food His son 'Abdu-r Rahman used to sit at table as safarchi (head butler), the superintendent of the kitchen, who was a Muhammadan, was also in attendance, and both watched to see if Abu-l Fazl would eat twice of one and the same dish If he did, the dish was sent up again the next day ~ If anything appeared tasteless, Abu-l Fazl gave it to his son to taste, and he to the superintendent, but no word was said about it. When Abu-l Fazl was in the Dakhn, his table luxury exceeded all belief In an immense tent, 1,000 rich dishes were daily served up and distributed among the amirs, and near it another large tent was pitched for all-comers to dine, whether rich or poor, and khichri was cooked all day, and was served out to any one that applied for it

"As a writer, Abu-l Fazl stands unrivalled His style is grand, and is free from the technicalities and flimsy_prettiness of other munshis, and the force of his words, the structure of his sentences, the suitableness of his compounds, and the elegance of his periods, are such that it would be difficult for any one to imitate him”

Other Indian writers have expressed similar opinions, and Blochmann, to whom the above translation is owing, says, “It would be almost useless to add to this encomium on Abu-l Fazl’s style” Abdu-lla, King of Bukhara, said that he was more afraid of Abul Fazl’s pen than of Akbar’s arrow. Everywhere in India he is known as the great munshi. His letters are studied in all madrasas, and though a beginner may find them difficult and perplexing, they are perfect models. But a great familiarity, not only with the Persian language, but also with Abul Fazl’s style, is required to make the reading of any of his works a pleasure. His composition stands unique, and though everywhere studied, he cannot be, and has not been, imitated” Yet attention may be called to the just criticism recorded by Inayatullah, the author of the continuation of the Akbar-nama, who says that the later volumes of this work were considered more laboured and abstruse than the first¹. The style is certainly more complicated and ambitious, and many unusual and even foreign words are employed, so that unwearied attention is required to seize and follow up the meaning of the author.

Abu-l Fazl was author of several works of repute. On his introduction to the Emperor, he presented a Commentary on a Surat of the Kuran, which he called Ayatul Kursi. But Badauni does not fail to record that “people said it was written by his father”. The Maktabatu-l ‘Allami, more commonly called Insha-i Abu-l Fazl, is a collection of letters written by Abu-l Fazl to kings and chiefs. The Ayar-i Danish is a translation of the

¹See infra next article

Arabic Kalila o Damna He was also the author of some smaller and less known works The greatest of his production was the Akbar-nama, in two volumes, and the A'in-i Akbari, which is considered to be its third volume. The A'in, or Institutes, may, however, be regarded as a distinct work A translation of it by Gladwin was published in the year 1800, but although a very incorrect production for the time, it was imperfect and often incorrect The first volume of a new translation by Blochmann, of the Calcutta Madrasa, has just been published* It is a precise and admirable version, and is enriched with numerous notes, which testify to the deep learning and great research of their author It includes also a series of memoirs of all the nobles and notable persons of Akbar's Court When the work is complete, the translation will be well worthy to rank with the original The purely historical part of the Akbar-nama comprises in the first volumes an account of the ancestors of Akbar from Timur to Babar It has a full history of the reign of Humayun, of which a few Extracts will appear in the following pages The history of the reign of Akbar is given in full, year by year, from the accession of the Emperor to the end of the forty sixth year of the reign, A D 1602 Many Extracts have been taken from this part of the work

The Akbar-nama enjoys a much higher reputation in India than in Europe The passage above quoted from the Maasiru-l Umara is a fair and temperate expression of Oriental judgment Sir Henry Elliot, whose opinion coincides with that expressed by Elphinstone, and adopted by Morely, gives an unfavourable verdict He says, "The authority of the Akbar-nama is not rated very high in Europe, and Abul Fazl is not for a moment to be compared, either in frankness or simplicity, with Comines, Sully, Clarendon and other ministers who have written contemporary history, for though he was a man of enlarged views and extra-ordinary talents, yet as Elphinstone remarks he was a professed rhetorician and is still the model of the unnatural style which is so much admired in India. He was besides a most assiduous courtier, eager to extol the virtues, to gloss over the crimes and to preserve the dignity of his master and those in whom he was interested. His dates and his general statements of events are valuable, but he requires constant attention not so much to guard against his barefaced partiality as against the prejudice which he draws on his favourites by his fawning and fulsome adulation of them and against the suspicions which he excites by his dishonest way of telling a story, even in cases where the action related was innocent or excusable. His narrative is florid feeble and indistinct overloaded with commonplace reflections and pious effusions generally ending in a compliment to his patron. Every event that had a tendency to take from his goodness wisdom or power, is passed over or misstated and a uniform strain of panegyric and triumph is kept up which disgusts the reader with the author, and almost with the hero. Amidst these unmeaning flourishes the real merits of Akbar disappear, and it is from other authors that we learn the motives of his actions the difficulties he had to contend with and the resources by which they were surmounted. The gross flattery of a book written by one so well acquainted with Akbar's disposition and submitted it appears to his own inspection leaves an impression of the vanity of that prince which is almost the only blot on his otherwise admirable character.

*In the year 1875

A careful examination of the whole of the book and the translating of many passages compel the Editor of this work to withhold his assent from this unqualified condemnation. It is true that in certain passages Abul-poses of his History, and the Editor of this work has had the benefit of it during a portion of the time that he has been at work upon the Akbar-nama. The translations of the Extracts which follow this have all been made by the Editor.

A lithographed edition of the Akbar nama, in three quarto volumes was printed at Lucknow in 1867, at the expense of the Raja of Patiala. It is a handsome and costly work, and it is greatly to be regretted that its literary value is by no means commensurate with the money expended upon it. Gross and obvious errors abound in it, and there are many passages wanting. In one instance the annals of six months of one of the most important years of the reign (the 17th) are altogether omitted. The Editor has used this edition, and it being the only one published, he has referred to it in the following Extracts. But his chief reliance has been on an excellent Muhasta MS belonging to the Royal Asiatic Society. He has also had the use of a fair MS belonging to the Library of the India Office, and of other volumes containing only portions of the work. A new edition of the work is promised for the Bibliotheca Indica.

The Akbar-nama has been translated into Hindustani by Muhammad Khulil Ali Khan, under the name of Hakikat-i Akbari.²

EXTRACTS

RELICS OF THE EMPEROR HUMAYUN

Kalinjar

[Text, vol. i p. 152] Five or six months after (his accession), Humayun marched to subdue the fort of ²The materials for this notice have been derived by the Editor from memoranda left by Sir H. Elliot, and from the valuable Memoir of Abu-l Fazl by Blochmann, printed as an Introduction to his translation of the Amir

Kahnjau He had invested the place nearly a month, when the garrison being reduced to distress, the commander (hakim) submitted. He gave twelve mans of gold, besides other things, as tribute, and the Emperor, acceding to his entreaties and lamentations, forgave him, and marched away towards the fort of Chunar, with the intention of besieging that fortress.

REBELLION OF THE MIRZAS

[Text, vol 1 p 153] In the year 940 H, 1533-4 A.D., Muhammad Zaman Mirza, Muhammad Sultan Mirza, with his son Ulugh Mirza, broke out in rebellion, and Humayun marched against them. He encamped at Bhojpur, by the side of the Ganges, and sent Yadgar Nasir Mirza over the river at the head of a force against the rebels. Yadgar attacked them, gained a victory, and took Muhammad Zaman Mirza, Muhammad Sultan Mirza and Wali Khub Mirza prisoners. Muhammad Zaman Mirza was sent prisoner to Bayana, the other two persons were blinded and sent away in disgrace. Muhammad Zaman Mirza, unmindful of the mercy shown him, pretended to be submissive, and, effecting his escape, fled to Sultan Bahadur, of Gujarat.

PRINCE KAMRAN GETS POSSESSION OF LAHORE

[Text vol 1 p 153] When Prince Kamran heard of the death of the Emperor Babar he left Kandahar in charge of Mirza 'Askari, and set off for Hindustan, to see how he might advance his own interests. At that time Mir Yunas 'Ali, who had been appointed by the late Emperor, was governor of Lahore. Mirza Kamran revolved in his mind a scheme for getting hold of Akbari To that Memoir the reader is referred for further details. See also Morley's Cat of the MSS of the Royal Asiatic Society.

Lahore. One might be easily pretended to have a conference with Kandhar Beg and spoke harshly to him, so that Kandhar Beg left the camp of the Mirza with his soldiers and went off to Lahore. Mir Yunis Ali was glad of his coming and showed him much attention, frequently inviting him to his house and enjoying his society. Kandhar Beg watched for opportunity and one night when they were drinking wine and the Mir's soldiers were gone to their homes, Kandhar Beg seized him put him in confinement and placed his own men in charge of the gates of the fortress. He then sent a messenger to call Mirza Kamran who was expecting such a summons and took off with expedition & gained possession of Lahore. He took Mir Yunis out of prison and offered to make over the government of Lahore to him, but the Mir declined to accept it and went to the Emperor Humayun. Mirza Kamran appointed his own officers over the panj of the Punjab as far as the Satala river of Ludhiana. He sent envoys to the Emperor warning him of his good intentions and asking to be confirmed in the government. Humayun in his kindness consented and recognized him as governor of Kabul, Kandhar and the Punjab. In the year 945 Mirza Kamran removed Mirza Aslam from the government of Kandhar and gave it to Khwaja Kalan Beg being annoyed with Aslam in consequence of his having been worsted in a fight with the Hazaras while on his way to Kabul.

MARCH AGAINST BENGAL

[Text vol. i p. 155] In the year 941 Humayun turned his attention to the conquest of the eastern countries and marched to subdue Bengal. When he arrived at the town of Kumar near Kalpi he was informed that Sultan Bahadur of Gujrat had laid siege to the fort of Chitor and had detached a large force under the command of

Tatar Khan, who had very ambitious projects in his head, so in the month of Jumada-l awwal Humayun fell back to resist his enemies

Tatar Khan pressed his delusive advice upon Sultan Bahadur, and strongly urged that he might be sent towards the Imperial dominions, representing Humayun's army to be given up to pleasure and indolence. Sultan Bahadur took measures to forward the views of the rebels. Having fitted out Tatar Khan, he sent twenty krors of the old Gujarat coinage,⁴ equal to forty of the ordinary Dehli standard,⁵ to the fort of Rantambhor, there to be expended by Tatar Khan in raising forces. He sent Sultan 'Alau-d din, father of Tatar Khan,⁶ in command of a strong force, against Kalinjar, to increase the rebellious feeling in that neighbourhood. Burhanu-l Mulk Bunyani was sent with a force of Gujaratis through Nagor, to make a demonstration against the Panjab. Under the idea that the Imperial army would now disperse, he divided his own army, and although wise and experienced counsellors advised him to keep his army together, their words had no effect. When Tatar Khan marched on his wild enterprise against Dehli, Sultan Bahadur himself proceeded to invest the fort of Chitor.

Tatar Khan, employing the money at his disposal, gathered a force of nearly forty thousand horse, of Afghans and others, with which he advanced and took Bayana. While this was going on, Humayun was engaged in his invasion of the east country, but on receiving the intelligence of it, he hastened back to Agra. Mirzas 'Askari and Hindal and Yadgar Nasir Mirza and were sent with eighteen thousand horse to meet the chief army of insurgents, which was marching against

⁴*Zar qadim Gujarat*

⁵*ma'amul dehli*

⁶*'Alau-d din was brother to Sultan Sikandar Lodi, and uncle of Sultan Ibrahim.—Text*

Dehli, for it was deemed expedient to defeat this army first. When the Imperial army approached the insurgents, numbers of the latter deserted every day, until the force dwindled down to three thousand horse. The men collected with so much trouble, and at so great an expense, had neither the heart to advance nor the spirit to fight. At length he (Tatar Khan), washing his hands of life, fought with all the strength he could muster, at Mandrail, and was there killed.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST SULTAN BAHADUR

[Text, vol 1 p 159] Humayun left Agra on this expedition against Gujarat in the beginning of Jumada-l awwal, 941 H. When he encamped near the fort of Raisin, the commandant sent large presents with a message, saying that the fort was His Majesty's, and the men of the garrison were the servants of His Majesty, and they would hold the fort till Sultan Bahadur's business was settled. As the Emperor was intent upon the conquest of Gujarat, he did not delay here, but marched on to Malwa and encamped at Sarangpur. Sultan Bahadur was engaged in the siege of Chitor, and when he heard of the Emperor's advance, he held a council with his officers, the majority of whom were for raising the siege, and marching against the Emperor. But Sadi Khan, a wise and prudent councillor, urged that the fort was upon the point of surrender, and that they should press the siege to a conclusion, for no Muhammadan king would attack while they were engaged in war with infidels. This advice was followed, and on the 3rd Ramazan, 941 H, the fort of Chitor was taken.

FLIGHT OF BAHADUR

[Text, vol 1 p 162] On the 21st of Shawwal Sultan Bahadur lost all hope. He ordered all the large guns and mortars to be filled with powder, and to be fired till they burst. When night came on, he, along with Miran Muhammad Shuja' and five or six of his personal associates, went out from the back of the camp towards Agra, and afterwards turned towards Mandu Sadr Khan and 'Imadu-l Mulk went off with 20,000 horse direct to Mandu, and Muhammad Zaman Mirza with another body went off towards Lahore to raise disturbances. Great cries and clamour arose on that night from the Gujarati camp, but the facts of the matter were not known to the Imperial army. The Emperor mounted and remained under arms till morning. It was not till one watch of the day had passed, that Sultan Bahadur's flight became known. The troops then entered the camp, and obtained great plunder. Khudawand Khan, the tutor and minister of Sultan Bahadur, was taken prisoner. He was very graciously treated, and taken into the Emperor's service. Yadgar Nasir Mirza, Kasim Sultan, and Hindu Beg were sent in pursuit of the fugitives. Sadr Khan and 'Imadu-l Mulk went straight to Mandu, and Humayun followed, and encamped before the fort. Rumi Khan deserted from the Gujaratis, and came in to the Emperor, who bestowed a robe upon him. On the 14th (?), Sultan Bahadur entered the fort, and the question of peace came to be debated, and it was proposed that Gujarat and Chitor should remain in the hands of Sultan Bahadur, and that Mandu should be given up to the Emperor. These terms were finally agreed upon by the negotiators on both sides. But on that night the garrison of the fort relaxed their guard, and a party of about two hundred soldiers of the Imperial army went to the back of the fortress, and scaled the walls by means of ladders and ropes. Jumping down from the walls, they opened the gate, and brought in their horses, and others followed. Mallu Khan, the commander of the batteries, a native of Mandu, who had the title of Kadir Shahi, learnt what was passing, seized a horse, and went to Sultan Bahadur. He was asleep, but the cries of Mallu Khan aroused him, and he rushed out with three or four attendants On his way he met Bhup Silhadi, one of his councillors, with about whom he joined On reaching the gate a maidan, they encountered a party of al Imperial cavalry Sultan Bahadur was tl them He was followed by some others, and way through and went off with Mallu Khan and another attendant to the fort of Sungar He had his horses let down (the precipice of the town) by ropes He himself followed through a thousand difficulties, and took the road to Gujarat Kasim Husain Khan (an Imperial officer) was stationed near the fort, and an Uzbek servant of his, named Borı, who had previously been in Sultan Bahadur's service, recognized his old master, and told Kasim Husain, but he took no notice of it So Sultan Bahadur escaped to Champanır, being joined on the way by about 1,500 men

RETURN OF HUMAYUN FROM GUJARAT

[Text, vol 1 p 172] After the conquest of Ahmadabad and the settlement of the affairs of Gujarat, Humayun marched towards the port of Diu (in pursuit of Sultan Bahadur), but when he left Danduka, which is about thirty kos from Ahmadabad, letters reached him from Agra with the information that affairs had gone on badly since his departure from the capital, and that revolts had broken out in several quarters News also came from Malwa, that Sikandar Khan and Mallu Khan had risen and attacked Mihtar Zambur, the jagirdar of Hindia, who had removed into Ujjain with his property The troops stationed at various places in the province had also gone into Ujjain, where they were besieged by the insurgents Darwesh 'Alı, Kitabdār, the governor, was killed by a gunshot, and the garrison then capitulated This intelligence determined Humayun to fall back, and take up his residence for a time at Mandu, whilst he cleared the province of Malwa of rebels, settled the affairs of the conquered country of Gujarat, and suppressed the revolts in the vicinity of the capital. He therefore placed Gujarat in charge of Mirza 'Askari.

“The citadel of Mandu”

SULTAN BAHADUR RECOVERS GUJARAT

[Text, vol 1 p 173] Nearly three months had passed after the Emperor's departure, when the enemy drew together and commenced operations. Khan Jahan Shirazi and Rumi Khan, whose name was Safar, and who was the builder of the fort of Surat, operated in concert. They took possession of Nausari, which was held by Abdu-lla Khan, an Officer of Husain Khan, and he retired to Broach. About the same time they took Surat. Khan Jahan then marched against Broach, and Rumi Khan embarked his guns and muskets (tufang) in war ghrabs, and proceeded thither by water. Kasim Husain (the governor), unable to make any resistance, went to Champanir, and from thence he proceeded to Ahmadabad, seeking help from Mirza 'Askari, and Hindu Beg. Saiyid Ishak, who had received from Sultan Bahadur the title of Shitab Khan, took possession of Kambay. Yadgar Nasir Mirza was summoned from Pattan to Ahmadabad by Mirza 'Askari. Darya Khan and Muhafiz Khan, who were proceeding from Raisin to Sultan Bahadur at Diu, finding Pattan deserted, took possession of it.

RETREAT OF MIRZA 'ASKARI FROM AHMADABAD

[Text, vol 1 p 174] When Mirza 'Askari retired from Ahmadabad, Sultan Bahadur was full of misgiving and anxiety, but this gave him courage. He pursued the retreating forces, and on coming up with them, Yadgar Nasir Mirza, who was in command of the rear-guard, turned upon him. A sharp fight ensued, in which many of Bahadur's advanced force were killed or taken prisoners Sultan Bahadur then stopped at Mahmudabad, and the Mirza rejoined his army. Mirza Askari had given up all idea of fighting and continued his march. He lost a good many men in crossing the Mahindari, whither Sultan Bahadur followed him.

MIRZA ASKARI AT CHAMPANIR

[Text, vol. 1 p. 175] When the Mirzas arrived at Champanir, Tardi Beg Khan received them hospitably, and then retired to his own abode. Next day the Mirzas with evil designs sent a message to him representing the distressed condition of themselves and their army, and asking him to give them some money out of the treasures of the fort. This would enable them to turn and face the enemy and to communicate with (Humayun at) Mandu which a messenger might do in six days. Tardi Beg did not accede to their request. The Mirzas then resolved to seize him to take possession of all the treasures and to proclaim Mirza Askari king. They would then endeavour to make terms with Sultan Bahadur, and if unsuccessful, they would march towards Agra, which had been left unprotected by Humayun because he preferred the climate of Malwa. Tardi Beg came out of the fort to wait upon the Mirzas but on his way he received information of their designs, and hastened back into the fort. He then sent to tell the Mirzas that they must not stay there, and they replied that they were going and wished him to come and say farewell. But he knew their object and sent a suitable answer. Next morning Tardi Beg fired a gun (to show that he was ready to fight), and the Mirzas marched off by way of Ghatkarji, in execution of their wild plan against Agra. Whilst they remained at Champanir, Sultan Bahadur did not cross the Mahindari which is about fifteen kos distant. But when he heard of their march towards Agra, and of the foolish scheme they had formed, he crossed the river, and advanced against

Champanir Notwithstanding the strength of the fort, and its abundance of munitions, Tardi Beg evacuated the fortress, and went to Humayun at Mandu, where he informed him of all the Mirzas' evil designs

REBELLION OF MUHAMMAD SULTAN MIRZA AND ULUGH MIRZA
[Text, vol 1 p 176] One of the disgraceful proceedings which recalled Humayun to Agra was the rebellion of Sultan Mirza and Ulugh Mirza his son It has already been related how they before rebelled, and how an order was given to deprive them of sight But the party entrusted with this order did not execute it, and they escaped. They now again commenced their rebellious proceedings, and after attacking Bilgram, they went to Kanauj, which was held by the sons of Khusru Kokaltash These men surrendered and were replaced in charge of Kanauj Mirza Hindal, who was in Agra, went out against them, and crossing the Ganges near Bilgram, the armies met, and a battle ensued, in which the rebels were defeated. Hindal pursued, and overtook them at Oudh, where Ulugh Beg and his sons were assembled and ready to fight again The news of the Emperor's return from Gujarat to Agra now arrived, and the rebels fought once more, and were defeated. Hindal then returned victorious to Agra

DEATH OF SULTAN BAHADUR

[Text, vol 1 p 177] When Humayun returned to Agra, Bhupal Rai, the ruler of Bijagarh,⁸ finding the fort of Mandu empty, came up boldly and took possession of it Kadir Shah also returned there, and Miran Muhammad Faruki also came up from Burhanpur Sultan Bahadur remained a fortnight at Champanir, and then returned to Div Upon reaching the port, he found the Portuguese commander had arrived there with his vessels and fighting men. The Portuguese chief was apprehensive that as the Sultan was no longer in want of assistance, he meditated some treachery. So he sent to inform the Sultan that he had come as requested, but that he was ill and unable to go on shore, so that the interview must be deferred until he got better. The Sultan, quitting the royal road of safety, proceeded on the 3rd Ramazan, 943 H, with a small escort, on board a boat to visit the Governor. As soon as he reached the vessel, he discovered that it was a mere pretence of sickness, and he was sorry that he had come. He sought to return directly, but the Portuguese were unwilling that such prey should escape them, and hoped that by keeping him prisoner, they might obtain some more ports. The governor came forward, and asked the Sultan to stay a little while and examine some curiosities he had to present. The Sultan requested that they might be sent after him, and turned quickly towards his own boat. A European kazi (priest?) placed himself in the Sultan's way, and bade him stop. The Sultan, in exasperation, drew his sword, and cleft him in twain, then he leaped into his own boat. The Portuguese vessels which were around drew together round the Sultan's boat, and a fight began. The Sultan and Rumi Khan threw themselves into the water. A friend among the Portuguese stretched a hand to Rumi Khan, and saved him, but the Sultan was drowned in the waves. His companions also perished.

⁸*Sixty miles south of Mandu*

HUMAYUN'S MARCH TO BENGAL

[Text, vol 1 p 184] When the Emperor arrived at Patna, part of his army having come by water, part by land, his counsellors advised him to delay his campaign till after the rainy season. But the King of Bengal urged expedition, and Humayun complied. When he arrived at Bhagalpur, he divided his army, and sent Mirza Hindal, with 5,000 men, over the river to march on that side On reaching Mungir, Humayun found that Sher Khan had left his son Jalal Khan, afterwards Salim Khan (Shah), with Khawass Khan, and with 15,000 men, in charge of the town of Garhi, which is the gate of Bengal, and had himself gone to Jharkand⁹ When the Imperial army reached Garhi, Jalal Khan, disregarding his father's commands, came out and attacked them, and defeated them Humayun then hastened forward, and the Afghans abandoned the place and fled

PROGRESS OF SHER SHAH

[Text, vol 1 p 186] [While Humayun was at Gaur] Sher Khan seized the opportunity to increase his power He besieged Benares, and in a short time got possession of the place, and killed the governor, Mir Fazali From thence he marched against Jaunpur, which was held by Baba Beg Jalair, father of Shaham Khan, who had been appointed after the death of Hindu Beg He set the defences of the place in order, and was joined from Oudh by Yusuf Beg, son of Ibrahim Beg, who was on the march to Bengal Yusuf Beg scoured the neighbourhood with his patrols, and was eager for the fray Jalal Khan, hearing of this, made a rapid march with 2000 men. When Yusuf Beg came in sight of this force, he at once prepared for battle He was strongly dissuaded by his officers, on account of the great disparity of the two forces, but he would not listen After fighting bravely, he was killed, and next day the enemy invested Jaunpur Baba Beg Jalair exerted himself strenuously in its defence, and wrote to the mirzas and amirs, as well as to the Emperor, to inform them of his position

SHER SHAH OCCUPIES BENGAL

[Text, vol 1 p 194] [After the battle of Chaunsa],

⁹Called Chaharkand in the text

Sher Khan resolved upon getting possession of Bengal, and marched as far as the frontier of Bihar. There he stopped, and sent his son Jalal Khan with a detachment on this expedition. In a short time he met Jahangir Kuli Beg,¹⁰ and the latter fought bravely. But the decrees of fate were against him, and the amirs of Bengal did not show proper spirit in opposing the rebels. Fond of their ease, they rendered no support to Jahangir Kuli. Unable to succeed in the field, Jahangir Kuli sought refuge with the zamindars, and he and many of his followers were killed. At ease as to Bengal, Sher Khan advanced, and got possession of Jaunpur. He then sent his younger son Kutb Khan against Kalpi and Etawa.

HUMAYUN'S BRIDGE OVER THE GANGES

[Text, vol 1 p 198] When Humayun reached Bhojpur, he found Sher Khan encamped with a large army on the other side of the Ganges. The Emperor ordered a bridge to be thrown over, and it was soon constructed at the ferry of Bhojpur. The Afghans brought up the elephant Gard-baz, which they had taken at the battle of Chaunsa, to destroy the bridge, and the elephant pressed against the head of the bridge and brought it down. It was now thought advisable to march along the bank of the river to Kanauj.

REIGN OF THE EMPEROR AKBAR

Famine

[Text, vol 11 p 42] At this time (first year of the reign of Akbar) there was a great scarcity in Hindustan. In some districts, and especially in the province of Dehli it reached a most alarming height. If men could find money, they could not get sight of corn. Men were driven to the extremity of eating each other, and some formed themselves into parties to carry off lone individuals for their food

¹⁰ Governor of Bengal, appointed by Humayun.

DESTRUCTION OF HIMU'S FAMILY ALWAR AND AJMIR

[Text, vol II p 56] Akbar was now informed that Haji Khan, a ghulam of Sher Khan Afghan (Sher Shah) a brave and able general, was setting up pretensions to rule in Alwar, and that Himu's father and wife, and all his property and wealth, were in that country. So the Emperor sent Nasirul Mulk (Pir Mahammad Sarwani) with a select force to attack him. Haji Khan, in dread of the Imperial army, fled before it arrived Alwar and all the territory of Mewat thus came into the Imperial power. The fugitives proceeded to Dewati majari, a strong place, which was Himu's family home. Much resistance and fighting followed. Himu's father was taken alive, and brought before Nasirul Mulk who tried to convert him to the faith, but the old man said, "For eighty years I have worshipped God in the way of my own religion how can I now forsake my faith? Shall I, through fear of death, embrace your religion without understanding it?" Maulana Pir Muhammad treated his question as unheard but gave him an answer with the tongue of the sword. He then returned with much spoil and fifty elephants to the Emperor. Haji Khan, when he left Alwar, proceeded to Ajmir deeming that a secure refuge for his family and prepared his soldiers for battle. The Rana who was a great zamindar, was the son of that rana who had acted improperly towards the late Emperor Humayun and had suffered defeat at his hands. Haji Khan made demands upon him and grievously troubled him, so that a battle was fought between them in the vicinity of Ajmir. Haji Khan and Muzaffar Khan Sarwani, his retil, exhibited conspicuous gallantry in the fight and the Rana who was too confident in the number of his forces was defeated. Haji Khan then took possession of Ajmir and Nagor and all those parts. When this success of Haji Khan's was reported to the Emperor, he appointed Saiyid Muhammad Kasim Khan Naishapuri and to march against him Intelligence was now brought that Haji Khan was so strong as to offer resistance to the forces sent against him, so the Emperor determined to proceed to Hisar, and to send reinforcements from thence After visiting the tomb of his father at Sirhind, he proceeded to Hisar, accompanied by Bairam Khan When intelligence of this reached Haji Khan, his forces dispersed Every man went to his own place, and Haji Khan himself hastened to Gujarat Muhammad Kasim Khan was sent by the Emperor to take charge of Ajmir Saiyid Muhammad Barha and Shah Kuli Khan Mahram were sent out with a force to capture Jitasaran, and they killed a great many Rajputs, and made themselves masters of the fort

SECOND YEAR OF THE REIGN

Death of 'Adali

[Text, vol 11 p 72] The son of Muhammad Khan, ruler of Bengal, Sadar Khan¹¹ by name, but who had assumed the title of Jalalu-d din, resolved to take his revenge on Mubariz Khan ('Adali) for having caused the death of his father on the field of battle He accordingly marched against Mubariz Khan, and overthrew and slew him in a great battle He had reigned four years and some days

THIRD YEAR OF THE REIGN

Adham Khan at Hathkant

[Text, vol 11 p 97] Among the transactions of this year was the appointment of Adham Khan with a body of men against Hathkant¹² which was the strongest

¹¹Sic—"Khizr Khan" was the real name

¹²On the left bank of the Chambal—See Glossary, vol 1 p 86, vol 11 p 26, "History of India" by Elliot and Dowson, Original edition place in the neighbourhood of Agra. The zamindars of this place were Bhadauriyas¹³ and others, and were remarkable for their numbers and courage. They were continually in rebellion against the Kings of Hindustan. Bairam Khan, having a rooted mistrust of Adham Khan, resolved to confer Hathkant upon him in jagir, thus at once removing him from Court, and providing for the chastisement of the malcontents of that neighbourhood.

FOURTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Fall of Bairam Khan

[Text, vol ii p 112] Bairam Khan had been appointed by Humayun tutor of his son Akbar, and the youth had often addressed him, as noble youths are accustomed to address their seniors, by the name "Baba". The Emperor was now mindful of the fact, and overlooked in consequence many of Bairam's unseemly actions. But at length Bairam's proceedings went beyond all endurance, and he formed some sinister designs in conspiracy with evil-minded flatterers like Wali Beg Zu-l Kadr and Shaikh Gadai Kambu. When the Emperor became acquainted with the evil designs of these conspirators, he communicated them, before they could be carried into execution, to some of his devoted and intelligent advisers, such as Maham Anka, remarkable for her intelligence, judgment, and sincerity, to Adham Khan, Mirza Sharfu-d din Husain, and some others. The Emperor crossed over to Bayana on a hunting excursion, and Maham Anka then made known the facts to Shahabu-d din Ahmad Khan, the governor of Dehli, a man distinguished for his judgment, shrewdness, and fidelity. The first person of distinction who deserted Bairam Khan was Kiya Khan Gang, an old and faithful servant of the throne. After that others fell off, one by one and two by two, and proceeded to Court. Maham

¹³*Ib*, vol ii p 25

Anka in accord with Shahabud din Ahmad Khan communicated all important matters to His Majesty and became responsible for the discharge of the duties of the minister.

As a political expedient and for the public discharge of business Maham Anka recommended Bahadur Khan brother of Mir Kuli Khan for the exalted office of minister and His Majesty appointed him.

But although he received Itimad-i-millat and bore the name of minister the real duties were discharged by Maham Anka.

THIRD YEAR OF THE REIGN

Character of Baham Khan

[Text, vol. ii, p. 16.] Baham's natural character was good and amiable. But through bad company, that worst misfortune of man, his natural good qualities were overclouded and innocence was forfeited by flattery. Every one who looks with complacency on his own merits and deserts opens his heart to the wiles of sycophants.

SIXTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Adham Khan

[Text, vol. ii, p. 181.] The folly and wilfulness of Adham Khan were well known. His mother Maham Anka had charge of the royal harem, and he now conspired with some of his mother's servants to carry off two of the beauties of Baz Bahadur who had lately been presented to the Emperor. When every one was engaged in preparing for the match and little heed was paid to what was going on, the abduction was effected. When this disgraceful action was made known to the Emperor, he sent two fast riders after the fugitives who excited themselves so well that they overtook them and brought them back. Maham Anka, lest these two women should be brought into the presence of the Emperor and expose her conduct and the villainy of her son, had the two poor innocent girls put to death, for dead people tell no tales. His Majesty had not yet torn the veil from his eyes, so he passed over this heinous crime

SEVENTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Prisoners of War not to be made Slaves

[Text, vol 11 p 202] One of the gracious acts of His Majesty in this (seventh) year of his reign was the prohibition against making slaves of prisoners taken in war. It had been the custom of the royal troops, in their victorious campaigns in India, to forcibly sell or keep in slavery the wives, children, and dependents of the natives. But His Majesty, actuated by his religious, prudent, and kindly feelings, now issued an order that no soldier of the royal army should act in this manner, for although evil-disposed men might follow senseless courses, and taking up arms against the Emperor might suffer defeat, the children and people belonging to them were to be secure from all molestation from the royal troops, and no one, small or great, was to be made a slave. All were to be free to go as they pleased to their own houses or to the houses of their relatives, for although the repression and destruction of insolent opponents and the chastisement and coercion of rebels are among the duties of the ruling power, and are approved by lawyers and men of justice, still the punishment of their innocent wives and children is a transgression of the law. For if the husband pursues an evil course, what fault is it of the wife? and if the father rebels, how can the children be blamed?

MURDER OF SHAMSU-D DIN MUHAMMAD ATKA BY ADHAM KHAN

[Text, vol 11 p 218] Adham Khan, the youngest son of that pattern of chastity Maham Anka, who had neither a well-ordered mind nor a good temper, in the rashness of youth and intoxication of prosperity, was very envious of Shamsu-d din Atka Khan. The Khan-Khanan Munim Khan was also under the influence of the same feeling, and exhibited it constantly in ways that no one of lower dignity could have done. He irritated and excited Adham Khan, until at last, on the 12th Ramazan, a great outrage was committed. Munim Khan, Atka Khan, Sahabu-d din Ahmad Khan, and other nobles, were sitting in the royal audience chamber engaged in business of state. Adham Khan came violently in with a party of ruffians more violent than himself. Those who were present in the court rose up to show their respect, and Atka Khan also half stood up. As soon as he entered, Adham Khan clapped his hand to his dagger in a menacing way, and faced Atka Khan. He then cast an angry look upon Khusham Uzbek, one of his officers, and upon the other graceless wretches who had joined him in his outrageous business, as if to ask them why they hesitated. The truculent Khusham Uzbek then drew his dagger, and inflicted a terrible wound in the bosom of the minister. Atka Khan in the greatest terror, rushed off towards the apartments of the Emperor and had nearly reached them when he received two sword cuts, and fell dead in the court yard of the palace. Dismay came upon all present and a great outcry arose.

The bloodstained murderer, with that demented presumption which marked his proceedings, now directed his steps to the private apartments where His Majesty was sleeping. He mounted, sword in hand to the parapet (suffah) which surrounds the palace on all sides about the height of a man and a half and endeavoured to force his way inside. A eunuch who was near shut the door and locked it, and refused to open it for all the menaces of the assassin. The attendants of the royal court were greatly to be blamed that they did not at once inflict merited punishment on the murderer and put a stop to his proceedings. But this want of resolution was probably ordained so that the courage and justice of the Emperor might become manifest to all, both small and great. The noise awoke him, and he inquired what was the matter, but no one of the inside attendants could inform him. He then went out himself to ascertain the facts. One of the old officers of the palace made known what had happened.

Amazed at the horrible statement, His Majesty inquired what it all meant, and the attendant then confirmed his words by pointing to the blood-stained corpse. When the Emperor realized the actual state of affairs, his anger blazed forth, and by a sudden inspiration he rushed out by another door, and not by that to which the assassin had fled in his vain hope. As he went forth, one of his attendants placed a sword in his hand without being asked for it. He took it and went on. On turning a corner of the parapet, he perceived the ungrateful culprit. Addressing him by an opprobrious epithet,¹⁴ he asked what he had done. The presumptuous villain then rushed forward, and seizing both the hands of the Emperor, besought him to inquire into and reflect upon the matter and not to condemn him without investigation. The Emperor, letting go his sword, delivered himself from the grasp of the culprit, and endeavoured to seize his sword. But the wretched man loosed his hold of the Emperor, and endeavoured to retain his sword. Relinquishing his attempt to get the sword, the Emperor struck him a blow in the face with his fist, which brought him senseless to the ground. Farhat Khan and Sangram Hoshnak were there present, and the Emperor with angry looks demanded why they stood there looking on. He ordered them to bind the mad-brained fellow and they and some others did so. He then gave his just command for them to cast him down headlong from the parapet. The stupid men showed tenderness where want of tenderness would have

¹⁴*Bacha i ladah, "son of a bitch"*

she said nothing disrespectful to the Emperor, but she was greatly distressed. Her heart received a thousand wounds and the colour forsook her face. She wished to go and see the body of her son, but His Majesty would not allow her, and he endeavoured to console and comfort her with kind and gentle words. On the same day the two corpses were sent to Delhi, and the Emperor, after doing his utmost to console Maham Anka, gave her permission to return home. That wise and grief-stricken woman respectfully took her departure. She then resigned herself to the divine decree, and passed her days in grief and sorrow. The disease with which she was afflicted increased, and forty days afterwards she died. His Majesty was deeply grieved at the death of this pattern of chastity. Her body was sent to Delhi with all respect and honour, and the Emperor himself followed it for some steps. The nobles and officers of the state all testified their respect, and the Emperor ordered a splendid monument to be erected over her and her son.

LIGHTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Remission of the Pilgrim Tax

[Text, vol. II p. 239] It was an old standing custom for the rulers of Hindustan to exact contributions, according to their respective means, from the pilgrims who visited the holy shrines. This tax was called karmu. His Majesty's judgment and equity condemned this exaction, and he remitted it, although it amounted to hundreds of rupees. An order was accordingly issued abolishing it throughout his dominions. He was pleased to say that although this was a tax on the vain superstitions of the multitude, and the devotees did not pay it except when they travelled abroad, still the course they adopted was their mode of worshipping the Almighty, and the throwing of a stumbling-block and obstacle in their way could never be acceptable in the sight of God.

NINTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Remission of the Jizya

[Text, vol. II p. 257.] One of the munificent acts of the Emperor at the beginning of this the ninth year of his reign was the remission of the jizya (poll-tax upon infidels), which in a country so extensive as Hindustan, amounted to an immense sum.

Conquest of the Garhakatanka

[Text, vol. II p. 261.] Khwaja Abdul Majid Asif Khan, although he was a Turk and a civilian, yet by the help of the good fortune of the Emperor he had performed such deeds as would have humbled even Turks in his presence. He now resolved upon attempting the conquest of Garhakatanka. In the vast territories of Hindustan there is a country called Gondwana, that is the land inhabited by the tribe of Gonds,—a numerous race of people, who dwell in the wilds, and pass most of their time in eating and drinking and the procreation of children. They are a very low race, and are held in contempt by the people of Hindustan, who look upon them as outcasts from their religion and laws. To the east of this country lies Ratnapur, a dependency of the country of Jhirkan, and on the west it borders on Raisin, belonging to the province of Malwa. The length of this district is 150 kos. On the north lies Panna,¹⁵ and on the south the Dakhin, and the breadth is eighty kos. This country is called Garhakatanka, and it contains many strongholds and lofty forts. It has numerous towns and villages, and voracious writers have recorded that it contains seventy thousand villages. Garha is the name of the chief city, and Katanka is the name of a place¹⁶ (near it), and these two places have given their names to the whole country. The seat of government was the fort of Chauragarh.

¹⁵This name is written "Patta" both in the print and in the MS, but the description given applies to Panna. Shaikh Illah-dad also writes it "Pattah" in his "Akbar-nama."

In former times there was no one supreme ruler, but the country was ruled by several rajas and rais, and at the present time, when, by the will of fortune, it no longer belongs to this race, there are several rajas, such as Raja Garha, Raja The fighting men of this country are chiefly infantry, the horsemen being few. From the earliest establishment of the Muhammadan power in India no monarch had been able to reduce the fortresses of this country or to annex the territory.

At the time when Asaf Khan received the jagir of Karra, and accomplished the conquest of Panna, the government of this country was in the hands of Rani Durgavati, commonly known as "the Rani." She was highly renowned for her courage, ability, and liberality, and by the exercise of these qualities she had brought the whole country under her rule. The author has heard from intelligent men who have been there that she had twenty-three thousand inhabited villages under her sway. Twelve thousand of these were managed by her own shikhdars, and the remainder were in the possession of tributary chiefs. The heads of the various clans paid their homage to her. She was the daughter of a Raja of the tribe of Chandel, who has named Salibahan, who was Raja of Ratah and Mahoba.¹⁷ He married her to Dalpat, a son of Aman Das. He did not belong to a high tribe, but he was wealthy and as evil times had fallen upon Raja Salibahan, he had consented to this alliance.

This Aman Das rendered valuable assistance to Sultan Bahadur Gujarati in the reduction of Raisin, he delivered in his (Aman's) female apartments. If a daughter was born, it was to belong to the father, but if a boy, Aman Das was to acknowledge it as his own, and no one should know anything about it. Gobind Das acquiesced, and a boy was born, who was represented to be the Raja's son. He received the name of Dalpat, and was married to Rani Durgavati. When he died, he left a son, named Bui Narayan, only five years of age. With the assistance of Adhir Kayath, the Rani assumed the government, showing no want of courage and ability, and managing her foreign relations with judgment and prudence. She carried on some great wars against Baz Bahadur and his officers, and was everywhere victorious. She had as many as twenty thousand excellent horse soldiers, and a thousand fine elephants. The treasures of the Rajas of that country came into her possession. She was a good shot, both with the bow and musket, and frequently went out hunting, when she used to bring down the animals with her own gun. When she heard of a tiger, she never rested till she had shot it. Many stories of her courage and daring are current in Hindustan. But she had one great fault. She listened to the voice of flatterers, and being puffed up with ideas of her power, she did not pay her allegiance to the Emperor.

¹⁶ mauza, "place" or "village"

¹⁷ The print and the MS agree in the names as here given

When Asaf Khan conquered the country of Panna, the Rani Durgavati, infatuated with the ideas of her army, her courage, and her ability, took no heed of her new neighbour. Asaf Khan at first kept up friendly and conciliatory relations with her, but he sent sharp spies and shrewd merchants into her country to get information of the communications and ways of ingress and egress. When he had obtained information of the wealth and treasures of this woman, he conceived the idea of making himself master of the country. He began first with ravaging the frontier villages, and went on until in the present year he received the Imperial command to effect the conquest of Garha.

TWELFTH YEAR OF THE REIGN SULAIMAN KIRANI OF BENGAL
 [Text, vol 11 p 409] While the Emperor was engaged in the siege of Chitor, Sulaiman Kirani of Bengal again had the Emperor's name recited in the khutba, and made a wolf-like peace with Mun'im Khan Khan-khanan. The facts of the case are as follows. When Mubariz Khan, better known as 'Adali, set up pretensions to royalty (in Bengal), Taj Khan Kirani with his brothers fled to Bihar. There he pursued an artful and wily course, both in the days of Muhammad Khan, ruler of Bengal, who had rebelled, and afterwards also in the days of Bahadur Khan, until the time when 'Adali was slain fighting against Bahadur Khan. When, after some time, the latter died, his brother Jalalu-d din advanced his claim to the sovereignty of Bengal and Bihar. Taj Khan and his brothers were sometimes opposed to him, sometimes in league with him. He also made an artful and hypocritical friendship with Khan-zaman. When Jalalu-d din died, Taj Khan obtained possession of Bengal and Bihar. He shortly afterwards died, and his younger brother Sulaiman succeeded, and established his authority over the two provinces. Sulaiman kept up a sort of friendship with Khan-zaman, and looking sharply after his own interests, he strengthened his position. Numbers of loving Afghans gathered round him, and he amassed wealth and gathered together many elephants. After Khan-zaman had received the punishment due unto his deeds, the Emperor appointed Mun'im Khan Khan-khanan to the government of Jaunpur. Asadu-lla Khan, an officer of Khan-zaman, had charge of Zamaniya, a place built by Khan-zaman, and on the death of the Khan, Asadu-lla, in his stupidity, sent a person to Sulaiman, offering to surrender the place to him and to become his subject. But Mun'im Khan having got information of this, sent some persons to Asadu-lla, who induced him to forego this determination, and to repair in person to Khan-

khanan The Afghan army, which had come up with the intention of taking possession of Zamaniya, went back disappointed Lodi Afghan, who was the chief minister of Sulaiman, and remarkable for his wisdom and intelligence, was on the banks of the Sone He knew Mun'im Khan Khan-khanan to be a man desirous of peace, so he entered into friendly relations with him, hoping thus to secure his own territories from the attacks of the Imperial forces Presents and letters passed between them, strengthening their friendship Meanwhile the Emperor was engaged in the siege of Chitor, and Sulaiman was occupied in subduing the Raja of Orissa and Ibrahim

But Sulaiman was ill at ease about Khan-khanan, so, while the Emperor was besieging Chitor, he sought to establish amity with him, Lodi being his medium After some correspondence, it was arranged that Khan-khanan should pay Sulaiman a visit, to establish friendship between the Emperor and Sulaiman, and to arrange for the Emperor's name and titles being read in the khutba and impressed upon the coins Khan-khanan determined to go and effect the objects in view, although many wise and sagacious persons endeavoured to dissuade him But he paid no heed to them, and proceeded to Patna on his visit, attended by three hundred chosen men and by several of his officers and their attendants, numbering altogether about one thousand men Lodi came to meet him, and show him proper respect Then came Bayazid, eldest son of Sulaiman, and at five kos from Patna, Sulaiman himself came forth to give him a formal state reception Sulaiman conducted him to his own dwelling, and there gave him a sumptuous entertainment. The Imperial name was read out in the pulpit, coins were struck with it, and suitable tribute (to the Emperor) was presented But a party of Sulaiman's turbulent adherents formed the design of seizing Khan-khanan, while the Emperor was engaged at Chitor with his great nobles, and while there was no one left at the capital who could interfere with their designs upon the Khan. When Lodi became acquainted with this conspiracy, he (endeavoured to divert them from their purpose) Sulaiman assented to his views, but the fierce Afghans would not listen to his words. Khan-khanan got information of the plot, and, with the advice of Lodi, he got away from his camp by a clever stratagem, and galloped off, attended by a small well-mounted escort. He was a long way off before the Afghans were aware of his escape, and as they had failed in their purpose, they affected to maintain a friendly feeling. Bayazid and Lodi hastened after the Khan, and, after showing him great honour and respect, they returned. Khan-khanan crossed the Ganges and after two or three stages, he received the despatch of the conquest of Chitor.

Sulaiman now returned re-assured to Bengal and devoted his attention to his own affairs. He treacherously seized upon the country of Orissa in which the temple of Jagannath is situated, and perfidiously killed the Raja Ibrahim (Sultan of Dehli), who was not quite right in his mind, and was soured by his fall from his lofty position, had taken refuge with the Raja of Orissa and still dreamed of sovereignty. Sulaiman by promises and oaths got Ibrahim into his clutches and then sent him to the next world.

SEVENTEENTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Battle of Sarnal

"Two hours before nightfall they fell in with a brahmin who informed them that the enemy with a large force had halted in the town of Sarnal, on the bank of the Sakur about four fars distant. On receiving this information, the Emperor held a council, and Jalal Khan urged that, as their own forces had not come up, and the enemy was in great strength, it was inexpedient to fight by day they should either wait for reinforcements, or fall upon the enemy by night. But this sensible and prudent counsel did not please the Emperor, who said it was unworthy of brave warriors, and that it was advisable to make a dashing attack at once. "Let each one of us," said he, "single out his adversary and bring him down." Trusting in heaven, they went on their course, till they came in sight of Sarnal. His Majesty went on a little in advance, to the bank of the Mahindari²⁰ to arrange his men. He gave orders for them to buckle on their armour, and when he thus prepared for the assault, he had not with him more than forty men.

"The text of this and the two following Extracts is taken from the Lucknow edition.

Intelligence was now brought of the approach of the heads of his columns, but he was so angry at their tardiness, that he declared none of them should share in the honours of the fight. But he was informed that they had lost their way, and that Shahbaz Khan who had been sent to hasten their arrival, had been long in reaching them. This statement appeased his anger. Among the chiefs of the army who now came up and joined him were Khan-i 'Alam, Sayid Mahmud Khan Barha, Raja Bhagwant Das, Shah Kuli Khan Mahram Kunwar Man Singh, Baba Khan Kakshal, Bhupat, Salim Khan Kakar, Bhuj Haji, Yusuf Khan, and some others. The whole force now amounted to about 200 men. As they were crossing the river, Man Singh requested that he might be appointed to the advanced force. His Majesty said that he had no army to divide but on that day they must all fight heartily together. But Man Singh earnestly entreated that, in order to show his devotion, he might be allowed to push on a few paces in front. He received permission, and with a few brave men went on in advance. Akbar himself and his companions followed, and all passed over the river safely at a ford.

²⁰ The Mahindari is the Mahi

Ibrahim Husain Mirza had previously entered the town of Sarnal. When he saw the dust of the approaching force, and the way in which the horsemen crossed the river, he told his companions that he was sure that the Emperor was there present. But the ill-starred foolish man led his forces out of the town to a rising ground, and there took up a position. When the Emperor's men had come out of the river, they were scattered and broken up into parties, each of which pushed on as best it could. The Emperor himself, with a few followers, approached the river-gate of Sarnal, where he was encountered by a party of the rebels. But Mukbil Khan, a Kalmuck slave, rushed forward with a few brave fellows, and soon watered the dust with their blood. On entering the town, they found it full of men, and learned that Ibrahim Husain Mirza had gone out by another way to prepare for battle.

The Emperor, having disentangled himself from the streets of the town, and the crowds of people, endeavoured to encourage his followers, and to strike dismay into the enemy. Baba Khan Kakshal, with a party of brave men assaulted, and bore back the enemy. Others also, as they got clear from the streets of the town, came up in all directions, and took part in the fight. Among them Bhupat, the brother of Raja Bhagwant Das, met his death bravely fighting with a party of the enemy he had encountered. The ground was rugged, and so covered with thorn hedges that two horsemen could not proceed abreast. His Majesty still pressed on slowly, and was supported by Raja Bhagwant Das. Three of the enemy now attacked them. One menaced Bhagwant Das with his javelin, but the Raja stood up in his stirrups, and avoiding the weapon, he struck his adversary so fiercely with his spear that he was glad to retreat. The other two attacked the Emperor, and a formidable hedge prevented Khan-i-Mun and others from rendering any assistance, but the Emperor dashed from the hedge upon his adversaries so fiercely that they turned and fled. Ibrahim Husain, who was fighting manfully, finding himself defeated, turned and fled. The royal troops pursued and cut down many of the fugitives.

AFFAIRS OF BENGAL

When the death of Sulaiman Kirini became known, Khan-khanan Mun'im Khan marched from the fort of Chunar against the province of Bihar. Sikandar Uzbek died about the same time. Khan-khanan then sent Iangra Kuli with a force against Hajipur and Idrisi with another detachment against Patna. Gujar, unable to resist, sent presents and propositions of submission. He offered to enter the Imperial service, and to assist in the conquest of Bengal upon condition of receiving Gorakpur for the support of himself and family, and of the province of Bihar being allotted in jagir to the Imperial nobles, or that the sarkar of Hajipur and Bihar should be assigned to him for that year, he being responsible to the Imperial treasury for the revenue, and that in the next year he should receive a jagir in Bengal. Mun'im Khan accepted this proposition, and was about to make Gorakpur over to him, when Lodi, whose craft appeared in all the matters of that country, conspired with Hashim Khan, and upset the arrangement. Gujar, finding that he had nothing to expect from Mun'im Khan, was obliged to side with Lodi.

Mun'im Khan, having received tribute from Lodi, started on his return, when intelligence arrived that Yusuf Muhammad had taken possession of Gorakpur. Mun'im Khan had taken this Yusuf Muhammad, son of Sulaiman Uzbek, to Court, and had brought his misconduct to the notice of the Emperor, who deemed it prudent to put him in confinement. But when His Majesty went on his campaign in Gujarat, Yusuf escaped from his prison in Agra, and wrested Gorakpur from the hands of the men of Payinda Muhammad Bangash. When Mun'im Khan was informed of this, he immediately ordered Khan Muhammad Basudi and Payinda Muhammad Bangash to repress the revolt. He himself also marched from the town of Muhammadabad along with Muhammad Kuli Khan Birlas, Majnun Khan Kakshal, and some other nobles. But on the march Majnun Khan, with all the Kakshals, parted from him. The reason of this defection was, that false statements had been made to Majnun Khan, that Baba Khan Jabbari, Mirza Muhammad Shah, and the other Kakshals who had accompanied the Emperor on the campaign in Gujarat, had killed Shahbaz Khan, and had gone over to join the Mirzas. In consequence of this, it was asserted that an order had arrived for the arrest of Majnun Khan. The Khan-khanan sent officers to re-assure Majnun Khan, and to bring him with them. But their efforts were in vain, until letters arrived from Baba Khan detailing the favours received from His Majesty, and the services he had rendered in the campaign. Ashamed of his suspicions, Majnun Khan returned and rejoined the army of Khan-khanan, but before he arrived, Khan-khanan had accomplished the reduction of Gorakpur.

Meanwhile Daud, puffed up with pride, had marched against Jaunpur, having sent on Lodi in advance with a select force and the elephants. He obtained possession of Zamaniya by the capitulation of Muhammad Kasim the muhr-dar (seal-bearer). Khan-khanan collected the amirs under his command, and sent forward a strong force against Daud, he himself following more leisurely. Lodi was greatly elated with the capture of Zamaniya, and he sent 5000 or 6000 men across the Ganges under the command of Yusuf Muhammad, who had escaped from Gorakpur and joined the Afghans. After he had crossed the Ganges, Muzi Husam Khan and Razi Gajpur attacked and defeated him, inflicting heavy loss. Muhammad Kuli Khan Birlas and other amirs joined the victors with considerable reinforcements, and Ghazipur Khankhanan also arrived with a strong force. Lodi threw up fortifications between the rivers Sah (Sue) and Ganges and there held his ground. Combats took place every day between the bold spirits of the two armies. But although the Imperial forces maintained a bold attitude they were inferior in men, elephants, and guns. The Emperor was at the time engaged in the siege of Surat, so Mun'im Khan offered terms of peace, but Lodi haughtily rejected them. The amirs in the royal army were in a depressed condition, and were neither inclined to fight nor retire. But the Imperial good fortune attended them, and Lodi accepted terms of peace and withdrew.

The reason of this was that when Daud came to Mongr from Bengal he made away with Yusuf, the son of Taj and nephew to himself in the apprehension that Lodi might support him. Lodi had been an old servant of Taj and he had given his own daughter in marriage to Yusuf, but his intercessions for him were of no avail. When Lodi became acquainted with the fact he deserted Daud, and joined Mun'im Khan sending suitable tribute to the Emperor. Daud, on ascertaining this defection, fell back, and shut himself up in the fort of Garhi, where he scattered the treasure of his father among his soldiers. Jalal Khan, Sayid Huri and Kala Pahar, whose name was Raju now separated from Lodi, and divisions arose in Lodi's forces. Lodi was thereby compelled to abandon his design of attacking Daud, and to take refuge in the fort of Rohtas. He wrote from thence to assure Mun'im Khan of his fidelity to the Emperor, and calling for his support. The

Khan sent him aid, and looked anxiously for the return of the Emperor

CHRISTIANS AT SURAT

Whilst the siege of Surat was proceeding, a large party of Christians from the port of Goa arrived, and they were admitted to an audience of the Emperor, although it is probable that they had come to assist the besieged, and to get the fort into their own hands. But when they saw the strength of the Imperial force, and its power of carrying on the siege, they represented themselves to be ambassadors, and besought the honour of an interview. They offered various articles of the country as presents. Akbar treated each one of them with great condescension, and conversed with them about the affairs of Portugal, and other European matters.

EIGHTEENTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Idar and Dungarpur

[Text, vol. iii p. 8] [When the Emperor set out from Gujarat on his return to Agra,] he appointed Muzaffar Khan to the government of Malwa. He also sent Man Singh, Shah Kuli Khan Mahram, and a strong force, to proceed by Idar to Dungarpur and that neighbourhood, to reduce to subjection the zamindars, and afterwards to proceed to Agra. The Emperor reached the capital on the 2nd Safar, 981, and soon afterwards Man Singh, and the other amirs who had gone by way of Idar, rejoined the Imperial standard. When this chief and his followers reached Dungarpur, they found the zamindars of that country prepared to resist. Man Singh defeated them, and inflicted great loss upon them. After ravaging the country, he went, in accordance with orders, to Udipur, the country of the Rana. The Rana came forth to meet him, and received with proper submission the royal robe which had been sent to him. He conducted Man Singh to his own abode, and there entertained him. Some treacherous designs entered the mind of the Rana, but he was dissuaded from them by his well-wishers, and Man Singh went his way in peace.

MUZAFFAR KHAN

[Text, vol iii p 8] Muzaffar Khan arrived to attend upon His Majesty, and was raised to the dignity of minister. An order had been sent from Gujarat, directing him to quit the place he might be in, and to repair at once to the Royal presence. He accordingly hastened from Sarangpur to the capital, and then was installed in office. But in a short time he became proud, conceited, and self-willed, so that he looked upon his position as due to his own merit not to the favour of the Emperor. After a time, when the matter of the dagh (horse-branding) came under consideration, he was too puffed up in his own conceit to inquire into the matter, but talked foolishly about it. [When the Emperor was about to embark on his campaign against Patna,] he offered the command of the camp of the Imperial household to Muzaffar Khan, but he further increased the displeasure of the Emperor by making improper objections to his acceptance of this duty.

NINETEENTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Capture of Hajipur

[Text, vol iii p 75] Khan-i Alam procured a number of experienced pilots, and embarking in boats on the evening of the 24th Amurdad, the pilots conducted the force across the river so cleverly that the enemy knew nothing of it. Then they ascended the small stream which parts from the Ganges and flows past Hajipur. The enemy, greatly astonished at the sight, opened a furious fire of cannon and musketry, and the assailants were on the point of being defeated. A number of ghrabs which the Emperor had near him were now sent to their support. The enemy endeavoured to stop them, but they were unable to make way against the stream, and failed in the attempt. The royal boats then proceeded to Hajipur by the river Gandak. They were met with a very heavy fire, but could not be stopped, and disembarking they made an assault upon the place. It was captured after some severe fighting. Some rascals set the town on fire and began to plunder, but the forts were taken possession of by the royal forces.

Teli-Garhi and Tanda

[Text, vol. iii p. 84] Garhi is the gate of Bengal. On one side of it is a lofty mountain, very difficult of ascent, even for a man on foot, how then can a horse man get up it? On the other side several rivers join the Ganges. In the midst a strong fortress had been built by the rulers of the country. A council of war was held as to the way of attacking it, and it was resolved that some way of access must be sought. The zamindars of the neighbourhood said that there was a secret way through the country of the Teli Raja, which, though impracticable for beasts of burden, might be surmounted by active and intelligent horsemen. Majnun Khan was sent at the head of a brave and resolute detachment by this route. Kiya Khan Gang was directed to proceed towards Garhi with a party of friendly zamindars. The rest of the army was about to march, when the sight of the Imperial forces completely overawed the enemy. The leading forces of Khan-khanan made them waver, but when Kiya Khan's force appeared, they were filled with consternation, and took to flight. A place thus strong, by the help of God, fell without a struggle!

On the 23rd Mihr the Emperor reached Iskandrapur, near to Manikpur, where he received a despatch from Khan-khanan, announcing that Daud had fled, and that the Imperial troops had occupied Tanda, the capi-

Khan was for some time stunned with his disgraee, but he at length listened to the prudent counsels of Khwaja Shamsu d din Khafi, and bringing out some of his hoards, he busied himself in equipping his forces. He soon obtained possession of Jundh and Sahsaram, which, in consequence of the Emperor's having been so fully occupied, had not been assigned in jagir to any one. He trained and prepared his forces carefully, and when Farhat Khan, with the other amirs, invested Rohtas, he showed himself fully ready for service, and soon proved his valour. Bahadur, the son of Haibat Khan, made a sortie from the fortress. He was opposed by Muzaffar Khan, who drove him back with a considerable loss of munitions and elephants. The amirs proceeded to invest the fortress, and he, attaching himself to Farhat Khan, exhibited great diligence.

In a short time, the conduct of Muzaffar Khan won back the Royal favour. The Emperor addressed a letter to him, with instructions to prosecute the siege of Rohtas if he and the amirs with him considered that the place might be reduced in a given time, but if the opinion was that the siege would be protracted, he was to raise it and employ his forces against the Afghans, who were creating disturbances in Bihar, and to compel them to become dutiful subjects of the Imperial throne, or else to inflict condign punishment upon them. Muzaffar Khan replied that the army was not possessed of the implements for carrying on a siege, and that the probable time of its fall could not be calculated,—it therefore seemed desirable to first rid the province of the contemptible enemy who distressed it. He accordingly joined Mirzada 'Alī Khan and the other warriors who had been left in the province by the Emperor. He also formed a union with Muhsin Khan, 'Arab Bahadur, and the forces which had been left under them by Mun'im Khan to protect his jagir. With these he rendered good service, and repressed all the malcontents in the province. He drove Adham Khan Mutanabhi out of Ibrahimpur and Darai Khan from the town of Jazarkamir to Jharkand.

When he had thus restored order the officers of Munim Khan were moved with envy against him and sent him away. As he had no jagu on which to support his followers he retired with Khudabad Birlas and Khwaja Shamsu-d din to Jundh and Sahsaram. As he was on his way thither intelligence reached him that those two places had been occupied by forces from Rohas. So he continued his march and by valour and good management cleared those two places of the enemy. He had no sooner done this than new disturbances broke out in Bihar. Disregarding the ingrateful behaviour of the Bihar officials, he once more intervened and rendered good service.

The circumstances of the case were these. Munim Khan Khan-khanan had left Arab Bahadur in Malur which is a fort between Bihar and Jharkand. Chazi and Haji two brothers, came with a party of turbulent Afghans from Jharkand and seized the place. Many of the garrison were put to the sword, but Arab Bahadur made his escape, and hastening to the amirs of the province, they gathered their forces and marched to repress this outbreak. The Afghans retired to the fastnesses of the mountains and defied them. The amirs went after them, and at length found themselves unable either to advance or retire. A party of nearly 300 Rajputs in the service of Raja Bhagwan Das, bravely advanced but were defeated, and lost nearly 100 of their number. They now sent to solicit aid from Muzaffar Khan, who soon joined them with his victorious followers.

A letter at this time arrived from Khan-khanan, which made them hesitate in their movements. It brought the information that Junaid was hastening by way of Jharkand to Bihar, and urged the necessity of overpowering him before he could obtain reinforcements Muzaffar Khan took a bold view of the matter, and resolved that the proper course was to crush the rebel Afghans before Junaid could join them. There was no knowing whether Junaid would reach the neighbourhood in less than ten days, and it was to be hoped that the enemy before them might be routed in one day, after which the Imperial forces would be in a better condition to meet the intruder. It was accordingly determined that a detachment should proceed with all speed and caution, and get close in to the rear of the enemy, while the main force prepared for battle in front. Muzaffar Khan commanded the centre, Farhat Khan the right, and Khawaja Shamsu-d din was placed in command of the force which was to gain the enemy's rear.

The enemy was posted on a hill, full of confidence in their numbers, and in the strength of their position. When they found themselves suddenly threatened both in front and rear, they were seized with dismay and fled. The Imperial troops achieved a victory, and secured much spoil. They followed in pursuit until they reached a hill near Rampur, in Jharkand, where the enemy made a stand. Muzaffar Khan made his dispositions in front, and Khwaja Shamsu-d din, as before, got to the rear of the enemy, and attacked bravely. Husain Khan and several leaders of the enemy having fallen, the rebels fled, and the Imperial troops gained a decisive victory. After returning thanks for their success, they withdrew, and repaired to their respective cantonments.

The news of this victory arrested Junaid for a time in his contemplated attack upon Bihar. But a few days afterwards he found the means of reaching Nuzhatabad in that province, and there raised a revolt. The amirs of the province withdrew into Patna, and in their distress again applied to Muzaffar Khan for help. He accordingly moved to their assistance. On his march, he was met by letters from the Emperor, acknowledging and eulogizing his services, and conferring upon him the jagir of Hajipur previously held by Muhammad Kuli Khan Birlas. This stimulated him to further exertions. He effected a junction with the other amirs, and began operations against the insurgents. He erected a bridge by which he passed over the Punpun river. But instructions now arrived from Khan Khanan directing caution in attacking Junaid, as he himself intended to march against him. The amirs concurred in this policy of procrastination, and although Muzaffar Khan advised a bolder course, his counsels were of no avail. He was adverse to remaining quiet or retreating, and was about to attack Junaid, when great alarm was raised by disturbances which had broken out at Hajipur, and he was obliged to repair thither.

Taj Khan Panwar and others had attacked Mir Mahmud Shaukat, who held Hajipur for Muzaffar Khan, and had killed him and about a hundred of his people. So Muzaffar Khan was constrained to relinquish his designs against Junaid, and he proceeded with Khudadad Birlas and others to Hajipur. Notwithstanding the numbers of his opponents, he determined to attack them. As a direct advance against them was impracticable he crossed the Ganges, and came to the town of Sawanli, between which place and Hajipur the river Gandak runs with a strong current. The Afghans were confident in their numbers, and in the weakness of their foes. But Muzaffar had resolution, which is the key of success and of victory. He was joined by Udi Karan, the zamindar of Champaran.

While the enemy was on one side of the river, and Muzaffar was on the other, seeking some way of getting over, the zamindar suggested a way of accomplishing this difficult operation. He said that higher up the river his people had some strong boats, in which the troops might be conveyed over. Three hundred men under Kasim 'Ali Sistani, etc., were sent over the river by night, attended by messengers, who were to bring intelligence of the passage having been safely effected. When the information was brought that this detachment had crossed over and were approaching the enemy, Muzaffar Khan sent some boats full of men over the river, under the command of Khwaja Samsu-d din and Khudasad Birlas, to attack the enemy in front. The Afghans received them with the fire of matchlocks, and showers of arrows, but in the midst of the fight, the drums of the force which had been sent to their rear spread a panic among the Afghans and they took flight. Many of them were slain. Hajipur was delivered from them, and great spoil fell into the hands of the victors. The inhabitants of Patna had watched the proceedings with malicious interest, but refrained from rendering the rebels any assistance, though they were filled with disappointment.

After achieving this success, Muzaffar Khan received information that Fath Khan Musazai, and some others, had assembled a large force of Afghans on the other side of the river Gandak, with the intention of raising disturbances. Muzaffar Khan, in his foresight and zeal, set forth at once to oppose them. On reaching the river, he went with a party to reconnoitre, and endeavour to find a place to cross over, for although the river is narrow, it is very deep. While thus engaged, he saw a party of the enemy's horse, about 200 in number. He immediately gave directions to Khwaja Shamsu-d din and Arab Bahadur to make a detour, cross over the river, and attack them unawares. They obeyed, but the enemy perceiving their approach, fell back to obtain assistance. Muzaffar Khan then passed over the river, to join his advanced force. The flying enemy, being joined by reinforcements, faced round and gave battle. The great numbers of the enemy struck terror into the Imperialists, so that they dispersed and fled. Many threw themselves into the river, and were drowned.

Muzaffar Khan was about to plunge into the river, when Khwaja Shamsuddin seized his bundle and made off towards the mountains, but he cut back a swift horse man to the camp to try and bring up more men. The enemy pressed on in pursuit but Khwaja Shamsuddin, Arab Bahadur and others about fifty in all turned round and checked their advance with showers of arrows. Night was coming on, and Muzaffar Khan was in this strait when the blaze of the Imperial good fortune shone forth.

A report had reached the camp of Muzaffar Khan that he had been killed, and the men were about to hasten off when the messenger who had been cut had arrived and revived their drooping spirit. Khudbad Bukhsh Mirza Ali and about 200 men boldly dashed across the river, and the messenger who had been sent for them took back the intelligence of their approach. The enemy notwithstanding their success and the excess of their numbers were unable to stand against the assault of this gallant band, but took to flight. Defeat was thus turned into victory, and great booty was won. Next day they plundered the camp of the Afghans and obtained much spoil. The machinations of the enemy were thus defeated. Those who escaped went and sought refuge with Iqbal Khan Pirmu. Here they pursued their evil designs and in the abundance of their wealth the poverty of their wisdom and the numbers of adventurers, they again took the offensive.

Muzaffar Khan prudently effected his retreat across the Gandrah and took up a position in a spot bounded on three sides by the river and on the fourth by a great swamp. There he busied himself in collecting men and stores. The enemy, emboldened by this retreat, came up and surrounded the force of Muzaffar Khan, but being unable to make any impression upon it they were disheartened. In the course of a few days Muzaffar's men increased in numbers and recovered their spirits. The zamindars of the neighbourhood also took heart, and exerted themselves in furnishing things required. A bridge was then thrown over the river To obviate any disaster in crossing, it was prudently resolved to send over by night a party of men, who were to make an entrenchment as a defence against the enemy, so that the troops might be able to deploy when they should get to the other side But no one was willing to undertake this duty till Khwaja Shamsud din Khafi boldly vounteered for the perilous work. He soon crossed over, and the Afghans retreated before him, in the expectation that the Imperial troops, finding their opponents in retreat, would disperse in search of plunder, and afford a favourable opportunity for attacking them Muzaffar Khan took all the proper precautions, and sent a strong force over to make the place secure The Afghans, aware of the movement, threw off all concealment, and moved a strong division against this advanced force The infantry gave way, and their flight caused a panic among a body of horse Their backward rush broke down the bridge, and near 300 men, horse and foot, perished in the river Khwaja Shamsud din, Khudadad Birlas, and several other distinguished soldiers made a stand, and twice checked the advance of the enemy with showers of arrows A third attack was made, but an arrow pierced the horse of Husain Khan, the commander of the enemy, and brought him down The enemy then broke, and desisted from their attacks No harm befel the brave Imperial soldiers By dint of great exertion the bridge was repaired, and all the army passed over The Afghans then retired, and joined their main army under Taj Khan

Muzaffar Khan followed them, and was informed by his scouts that a party of the rebels, in perfect ignorance of his approach, was seeking for a suitable position for earthworks Muzaffar Khan left Khudadad in command of a small force, to secure his camp, and marched with the design of making the enemy's men prisoners. He fell suddenly upon them and after a short resistance they fled precipitately. Many were killed among whom was Iq Khan Panwar whose head had been cut off and brought in by Haji Pahlawan, without his knowing who the victim was. Jalal Khan Ghazni one of their bravest chiefs was taken prisoner and many others were taken or slain. A complete victory was gained, but although nightfall and the thick growing trees prevented the destruction of the rebels' houses many of the brave soldiers secured a good booty. Next morning the army advanced but the enemy dispersed, and threw themselves into the river. Great numbers perished but about 100 of the boldest succeeded in reaching the opposite shore. This revolt was thus entirely suppressed.

Soon after this Sati and Jatri²¹ with a party of Afghans seized the opportunity to take possession of the country of Bakri. This is a populous district thirty Los long and twenty Los broad in the vicinity of Mongir by the river Ganges. When Muzaffar Khan was informed of this outbreak he marched to suppress it. A sharp action followed in which Iq Khan the commander of the insurgents and seventy-nine of his men fell. Muzaffar then occupied the country.

These successes of Muzaffar Khan made Munim Khan Khudhramin wise to his remaining in that neighbourhood, so he sent an order directing him to repair immediately to Court. But while Muzaffar was chasing in vexation a command arrived from the Emperor ordering him to remain where he was and carry on his work until recalled by an Imperial order. So he returned joyfully to Hajipur and shortly afterwards the far-seeing Emperor appreciating his services and merits, bestowed upon him the wide territory extending from the ford of Chumsa to Garhi.

²¹Names of two Afghans

RAJA TODAR MAL

[Text, vol iii p 138] Raja Todar Mal now arrived at Court, bringing with him fifty-four elephants, which had been taken in Bengal, in the campaign of Takrohi. These he presented, and he made a report upon the state of the country. He received many marks of favour, and was promoted to the dignity of diwan, and to the charge of the revenue and civil affairs of the Empire. He was an honest sincere man, and devoid of avarice. Would that he had been free from hatred and revenge, and that harshness had not been so conspicuous in his character!

TWENTY-FIRST YEAR OF THE REIGN

Conquest of Siwana

[Text, vol iii, p 147] Siwana is a famous fortress in the province of Ajmir, and belonged to Chandar Sen²². It was held by Batha Rahtor. Shah Kuli Khan Mahram and Rai Singh had not conducted their operations skilfully. The horses of their men were out of condition, and want of grain and provender had reduced their army to a miserable state. Saiyid Ahmad and others were first sent to assist, and to do their best in reducing the fort, so that the troops might return. The amirs hastened from their estates to take their part in the siege. Just at this time Jalal Khan was killed, and this encouraged the rebels to raise their heads still higher in rebellion. More especially Kalla, son of Rai Ram, and grandson of Mal Deo, who collected a large number of men in the fort of Wikur. The Saiyids of Barha and other chiefs of the army were directed to put down these rebels, and the operations against Siwana were suspended. Shahbaz Khan was appointed to conduct a reinforcement, and return to Court. When he approached the scene of operations he learned that the Imperial army had already invested the fortress and were pressing it hard. Shadibek Khan proceeded forward, slowly, to take part in the siege. By vigorous and vigilant exertions the place was reduced and the garrison made prisoners. Leaving a detachment under the Bashi Savids as a garrison, he marched against Siwana.

²²“Son of Mal Deo”—Faizi Sirhindi

On his way from the fortress of Siwana he came to a stone fort called Dundur. He found it occupied by a body of Rajputs of the Rajah clan who refused his summons to surrender. So he set about the siege in earnest and prepared to stay. In a short time the fort was taken and many of the Rajputs were slain. He then marched against Siwana, the garrison of which place had been intimidated by the fall of Dundur. He again constructed a fort and proceeded on the operations of the siege bravely and boldly that the garrison after a short delay capitulated.

DEATH OF DUNDUR

[Text vol. iii p. 108.] When victory declared for the Imperial army the valiant Dundur was made prisoner. His horse and fist in the mud and a party of brave men seized him and brought him prisoner to Khunjhan. The Khan said to him: 'Where is the treaty you made and the oath that you swore?' Throwing aside all shame he said: 'I made that treaty with Khun-Jhan. If you will fight we will have a little friendly talk together and enter into another treaty.' Khunjhan fully aware of the craft and perfidy of the traitor ordered that his body should be immediately relieved from the weight of his rebellious head. He was accordingly decapitated and his head was sent off express to the Emperor. His body was exposed on a gibbet at Tundir the capital of that country.

²²*On the Lom, thirty-five miles from Siwana*

CAMPAIGN AGAINST GAJPATI CAPTURE OF ROHTAS

[Text, vol iii p 161] In consequence of the difficulty of transporting camp equipage, Gajapati²⁴ had broken out into rebellion, and formed the design of plundering Ghazipur. But Shahbaz Khan arrived with the royal forces, and shook the foundations of his position. He fled to the ford of Chaunsa, pursued by the Imperial troops. There he crossed the Ganges, and continued fighting. The royal forces, having found means of crossing the river, pursued him, and inflicted upon him a severe defeat, taking his boats, guns, and camp equipage. In their pursuit of him, they came to the fort of Mahawa,²⁵ which they invested, and Sangram, the commandant, immediately surrendered. Shahbaz placed a garrison in it, and continued his pursuit of the rebel, who fled into the wooded and rugged country of Bhojpur. All efforts to overtake him proving vain, the royal troops retired. On the following day the rebel attacked the retreating forces on the bank of a river, and kept up the fight till night. The ground was so broken and confined, that the royal troops were unable to cross in face of their assailants, but, being guided by Sangram, they fell upon the baggage of the enemy. Unable to accomplish anything by day, the rebel made a night attack, but being again defeated, he fled to Jagdespur, one of his strongest retreats. For two months the royal forces were actively engaged in clearing away the trees round the fort. At length the place fell, and the family and property of the rebel was captured, but he himself escaped.

After this defeat, Gajpati fled in great distress and terror to the foot of the hills of Rohtas, and there concealed himself. Bari Sal, his brother, with a large body of rebels, sought refuge among the woods and defiles, but they were discovered and slain by the Imperial forces, and great spoil was captured

²⁴Briggs calls him "Raja of Gunjowty"—Firishta, ii, p 250

²⁵*Twenty-eight miles north-west of Rohtas*

When Gajpati was (first) defeated, he placed his son Sri Ram with a body of rebels and the necessary armament, in the fort of Sher-garh²⁶ Shahbaz Khan invested this fort, constructed sabats and made regular approaches. The people of the neighbourhood were coming in and submitting to the Imperial government, when a great and unexpected piece of fortune fell upon him. At the time when this country had no (Imperial) noble to manage it, the fort of Rohtas fell into the hands of Junaid, and he placed it under the charge of Saiyid Muhammad, one of his most trusty adherents. On the death of Junaid, the Saiyid held the fort for some time as a rebel against the Imperial authority, but he at length induced his men to agree in sending tribute to the Emperor by the hands of some faithful adherent. When the Imperial army approached the fortress under the direction of guides, without whose help the access would have been difficult, they resolved to make submission, and capitulated. Muzaffar Khan also was approaching with the army of Bihar to attack the fortress. The garrison sent out officers to treat with Shahbaz Khan and surrender the fort. He joyfully agreed to their terms, and took possession of the fortress. Upon hearing of the capitulation, Muzaffar Khan returned disappointed.

The fortress having thus fallen, the people of the hills were filled with alarm. Sri Ram surrendered the keys of Sher-garh to Shahbaz Khan.

TWENTY-SECOND YEAR OF THE REIGN

The Mint

[Text, vol. III p. 195] On the 2nd Azar, Muzaffar

²⁶Or "Shergully", sixty-five miles S E of Jagdespur.

Khan, Raja Todar Mal, and Khwaja Shah Mansur were summoned to a council at Kot-pakali, where many important matters were discussed and settled. Bihar was given to Shuja'at Khan, Mir Mu'izzu-l Mulk and other adherents. The mint of the Empire, which had been under the management of a chaudhari, was now divided.²⁷ That of Fathpur was placed under the direction of Khwaja 'Abdu-s Samad, the elegant penman (Shayrin-kalam), that of Lahore under Muzaffar Khan, of Bengal, under Raja Todar Mal, of Jaunpur, under Khwaja Shah Mansur, of Gujarat, under Khwaja 'Imadu-d din Husain, and of Patna, under Asaf Khan. On the same day an order was issued, directing the coinage of four-cornered rupees.

EUROPEAN NOVELTIES

[Text, vol. III p. 196] Haji Habib had been sent to the port of Goa, with a large sum of money and intelligent artisans, to examine and bring to the Emperor's knowledge the various productions of art and skill to be found in that town. He now returned to Court, having with him a number of men clad in Christian garb, and beating drums and playing European instruments. He presented fabrics which he had selected. The artisans who had gone there to acquire knowledge exhibited their skill, and received applause. Musicians of that country played upon various instruments, especially upon the organ, and gave great delight to all who heard them.

DEFEAT OF THE RAJA OF MADHGARH

[Text, vol. III p. 196] This zamindar having been guilty of some overt acts, Sadik Khan was sent with a considerable force to induce him by kind words to return to his allegiance, or to compel him, if necessary. The Imperial force prepared to make its way through the jungle to the town of Undachā,²⁸ which is the principal place of that chief. When they approached the fort of Karhara,²⁹ they found that Paramanand Panwar had shut the fort, and prepared against a siege. The royal forces invested the place, and in short time it was compelled to capitulate. The army then pursued its march, but was greatly impeded by the dense woods. Cutting their way through, they reached the Satdhara³⁰ on the north of Undacha. The army of the insurgent was arrayed for battle on its banks. Skirmishes went on for a day or two, and the Imperial army was at last directed to cross the river (Severe fighting, with varying results). The enemy were at length defeated and put to flight, and their camp was plundered. Horal Deo, the eldest son of the Raja, was killed. Rani Sah, another son, was wounded, and fled and near 200 Rajputs were slain.

²⁷The printed text has "tafhim" instead of the right word, "taksim;"—an absurd blunder, but not worse than many others.

TWENTY-THIRD YEAR OF THE REIGN

Conquest of Kumbalmir

[Text, vol iii p 205] Kumbalmir is a fortress situated upon a high mountain, and difficult of access. It was held by dependents of the rana, and few had been able to make any impression upon it in former times. Shahbaz Khan was sent in command of an army against this fortress. Raja Bhagwant Das, Kunwar Man Singh, and other chiefs were directed to accompany him. On the 4th Farwardin, Shahbaz invested the place. Fear and distraction fell upon the enemy, and by accident a large gun that was in the fort burst, and destroyed the magazine. The assailants immediately dashed up the hill. They encountered a large body of Rajputs posted at a gate near the temple, who made a firm stand, but were cut to pieces, and the fort was secured. The Rana then fled to the hills of Banswarra. Shahbaz Khan placed Ghazi Khan Badakhshi in command of the fort, and went in pursuit. The fort of Kokanda fell into his power, and he also captured the fort of Udipur, where he secured an immense booty.

²⁸*Urcha on the Betwa, in Bundelkhand. It is the chief seat of the Bundelas.*

²⁹*About eighteen miles south of Narwar.*

³⁰*'Seven streams.' The Betwa is so called at Urcha.*

TRIBUTE OF BENGAL. ARRIVAL OF A EUROPEAN AND HIS WIFE

[Text, vol. III p. 207] While the Emperor was encamped on the Beyah, letters arrived from Khan-jahan, accompanying the tribute from Bengal, and from Raja Mal Gosain, the zamindar of Kuch, who had renewed his demonstration of obedience to the Imperial throne. The tribute of Bengal consisted of the choicest productions of Bengal, and of fifty-four elephants. Along with these came a European, named Partab Bar, one of the chief merchants of the ports of Bengal, who was accompanied by Basurba³¹ his wife, he was graciously received at Court, and his sound sense and upright conduct won the favour and esteem of the Emperor.

DISCUSSIONS IN THE 'IBADAT-KHANA

[Text, vol. III p. 215] When the capital was illumined by the return of the Imperial presence, the old regulations came again into operation, and the house of wisdom shone resplendent on Friday nights with the light of holy minds. On the 20th Mir, in that place of meeting, the lamp was kindled to brighten the solitude of seclusion in the banquet of society, and the merits of the philosophers of the colleges and monasteries were put to the test of the touchstone. Sufis, doctors, preachers,

³¹These names are very doubtful lawyers, Sunnis, Shi'as, Brahmans, Jains, Buddhists, Ghar-baks,³² Christians, Jews, Zoroastrians, and learned men of every belief, were gathered together in the royal assembly, and were filled with delight. Each one fearlessly brought forward his assertions and arguments, and the disputations and contentions were long and heated. Every sect, in its vanity and conceit, attacked and endeavoured to refute the statements of their antagonists.³³

One night the 'Ibadat-Khana was brightened by the presence of Padre Radalf,³⁴ who for intelligence and wisdom was unrivalled among Christian doctors. Several carping and bigoted men attacked him, and this afforded an opportunity for a display of the calm judgment and justice of the assembly! These men brought forward the old received assertions, and did not attempt to arrive at truth by reasoning. Their statements were torn to pieces, and they were nearly put to shame, and then they began to attack the contradictions in the Gospel, but they could not prove their assertions. With perfect calmness and earnest conviction of the truth, the Padre replied to their arguments, and then he went on to say, "If these men have such an opinion of our Book, and if they believe the Kuran to be the true word of

³²Charvakas, Hindu materialists

³³ Here, and in other parts of this chapter, there are in the MSS long passages which are not printed in the Lucknow edition. Among the rest, that about the Padre

³⁴ There can be little doubt, as Blochmann has suggested, that Rodolph is the true reading, but one of my MSS reads "Radif," and the other "Raunak," a known word having been substituted for an unknown in each case. The translation used by Elphinstone has "Radif." The person intended was Padre Rodolpho Aquaviva, a missionary from Goa—See Blochmann's A'in-i Akbari, vol. 1 p. 167, Murrari's Historical Account of Discoveries and Travels in Asia, vol. 11

God, then let a furnace be lighted, and let me with the Gospel in my hand, and the 'ulama with their holy book in their hands, walk into that testing place of truth, and the right will be manifest" The black-hearted mean-hearted mean-spirited disputants shrank from this proposal, and answered only with angry words This prejudice and violence greatly annoyed the impartial mind of the Emperor, and, with great discrimination and enlightenment, he said "Man's outward profession and the mere letter of Muhammadanism, without a heartfelt conviction, can avail nothing I have forced many Brahmans, by fear of my power, to adopt the religion of my ancestors, but now that my mind has been enlightened with beams of truth, I have become convinced that the dark clouds of conceit and the mist of self-opinion have gathered round you, and that not a step can be made in advance without the torch of proof That course only can be beneficial which we select with clear judgment To repeat the words of the Creed, to perform circumcision, or to lie prostrate on the ground from dread of kingly power, can avail nothing in the sight of God

Obedience is not in prostration on the earth Practise sincerity, for righteousness is not borne upon the brow"

TWENTY-FIFTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

A Census

[Text, vol iii p 324] An Imperial mandate was issued directing the jagirdars, shikhdars, and darogahs throughout the Empire to draw up, village by village, lists of all the inhabitants, specifying their names and occupations, and that these lists should all be collected together The officers were not to allow any one to reside who was not engaged in some business or occupation, and they were to inquire into the arrival and departure of clever men, and ascertain whether their designs were good or evil, so that in a short time the true characters of the outwardly respectable and inwardly malicious might be brought to the test. This regulation was the means of establishing tranquillity, and of providing security for the broad expanse of Hindustan

TWENTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Revenue Regulations

[Text, vol. III p. 368] At the beginning of this year, His Majesty directed his attention to an improvement of the administration of his territories, and passed new laws for the management of civil and revenue business. Raja Todar Mal had, previous to this, been named as wazir, but the dangers and difficulties of the post, and the opposition to be encountered, made him unwilling to accept the office. But this unambitious man, who was acquainted with all the mysteries of administration, was now elevated to the office of diwan, and in reality to the wakalat. His clear judgment soon set matters to rights. Civil and revenue matters received his especial attention. Careful to keep himself free from all selfish ambition, he devoted himself to the service of the State, and earned an everlasting fame. He devoted his skill and powerful mind to simplify the laws of the State, and he allowed no grasping and intriguing men to obtain any influence over him. He now proposed several new laws calculated to give vigour and glory to the government.

That the collectors of the khalisa lands and the jagirdars should realize³⁵ the mal and jihat (cesses), according to the dasturu-l 'amal, and if by fraud or oppression anything beyond the settled amount should be received from the cultivators, they were to account it an excess of the proper payment, and were to levy a fine upon those who had exacted it, and enter the amount in the monthly accounts. At every harvest they were to carefully guard the rights of the lower classes. These cases of giving and taking were dealt with in two ways,—the complainant received redress, and power was given to punish the offenders.

³⁵The word used is baz-yaft, "resumption." Its meaning here seems to be that the totals were to be "brought back" to the settled standard.

The amils of the khalisa had two subordinates, a karkun (manager), and a khass-navis (accountant). These officers had been oppressors, and leaguings with the rich, they had been a great source of evil to the poor. If instead of these two infamous officials, one worthy and honest man should be appointed, the country would prosper, and the people would be contented.

It had been discovered that in the khalisa districts, the cultivated lands decreased year by year, but if the lands capable of cultivation were once measured, they would increase year by year in proportion to the powers of the rariyats, and engagements should be made for them according to rule. The rariyats having nominated each other as sureties, were to take the proper writings, and in all questions of arrears were to be treated in a considerate manner.

✓ For lands which had lain waste four years, they were to receive a deduction of one-half for the first year, for the second year one-quarter, and for the third year they were to pay according to established rule. For lands which had lain untilled for two years they were to receive a deduction of one-fourth for the first year. For uncultivated lands they were to receive a small allowance of grain, so as to make the lands capable of yielding revenue. When advances were made for the assistance of poor cultivators, engagements were to be taken from men of respectability, and part was to be repaid at the spring harvest, part at the autumnal harvest. By these arrangements, the country would in a short period become cultivated, the rariyats would be contented, and the treasury flourishing. When the collectors increased the assessment, back payments were not to be required from small and insignificant estates

Every year a report was to be made to the Emperor by the collectors, so that efficient officers might receive augmentations of their pay, and an increase of their honours and rewards, while those who did not faithfully discharge their duties would incur punishment and fall into disgrace

When a portion of cultivated land was fixed upon, some surveyors, in proportion to its extent, were to be appointed. They were first to measure the land, and were then to acquaint themselves with its quality and produce. (The collectors) were to select a central spot for their residence. They were to carry out their duties everywhere diligently, and to inquire into the state of affairs. In seasons when a sufficient quantity of rain fell, and the lands received adequate irrigation, two and a half biswas (in the biglia) were to be left unassessed, in jungles and sandy lands, three biswas were to be left. Weekly accounts of sequestrations, and daily accounts of the collections, were to be sent monthly to the Imperial Exchequer. An Imperial order was issued, that when lands suffered under any visitation of Providence, a description of them was to be drawn up, and a copy of it sent to Court, so that the Emperor might give directions appropriate to the case.

If the occupants of hill forts, trusting in the security of their fastnesses, should engage in freebooting, the generals, the fauj-dars, the feudatories, and the revenue collectors were directed to unite and effect a remedy. They were first to admonish the offenders, and if that proved unavailing, they were to take measures for inflicting chastisement upon them. Their country was to be laid waste, and the land was to be granted to jagirdars, from whom the revenue officers were to make no demands. If the Imperial troops received any injury, a fine was to be imposed upon the offenders.

considered of full value, and worth 39 dams. If deficient one and a half to two surkhs, it was worth 38 dams. The La'li Jalali of proper touch and just weight, the Jalala rupee not more than from one and a half to two surkhs deficient, old rupees of the Akbar-shahi coinage which might not be deficient more than from three buinj to one surkh, were to be received at the treasury. Those of greater deficiency were to be tested separately by the cashier, the particulars of them were to be entered by the accountants in their day books, and accounts of them were to be sent every day to the Government record office. The jagirdars, treasurers, and sarrafs (money-changers) were to act upon the above-mentioned rules. The officers of the khalisa and the jagirdars were to make proper reports about the well conducted and the ill conducted, the obedient and the refractory people in their jurisdictions, so that they might get their deserts, and that the tranquillity of the country might be secured. Instead of the former expenses (kharch), the amount having been settled at one dam for each bigha of cultivated land, it was hoped that, upon this principle, 24 dams might be the estimated sum to be allowed for each cultivator³⁶

TWENTY EIGHTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Third Conquest of Bengal

[Text, vol. iii p. 390] In the previous year Khan-i 'Azam Mirza Koka received the Imperial commands to put aside his work of punishing the rebels of Bihar, and to devote his energies to the conquest of Bengal. By good fortune, the rebels of Bihar had been put to flight before the arrival of the Imperial forces. But the rainy season came on, and the campaign was deferred for that year. When the rains subsided, Sadik Khan, Shaikh Ibrahim, and Shaikh Farid Bukhari took their departure from Court.

³⁶*az in wajeh bist wa chahar dam bi kusht wa kar samayan marhamat shud*

Officers were also sent by different roads to all the chiefs of Illahabas, Oudh and Bihar. In a short time a large force was collected in Hajipur, and was eager for the advance. Khan-i 'Azam, with an escort of chosen troops, proceeded by way of Garhi Tarsun Khan and others crossed over the river to co-operate on the other side, but being greatly impeded by the abundance of trees, ravines, and water and mud, they recrossed the river and joined the army near Mongir. Tarsun Khan and then went forward one or two stages in advance. The rebels occupied a position near Kali-gang, and were prepared to fight. Mirza Sharfu-d din Husain, Baba Khan Kakshal, and many other leading rebels were dead, so Ma'sum Kabuli had succeeded to the command. Katlu Lohani headed the rebels in Orissa, and part of Bengal also was in his power. On hearing of the advance of the Imperial army, Ma'sum Kabuli fell back towards Katlu, with whom he entered into negotiations, and succeeded in obtaining a promise of support in men and munitions, when the Imperial forces should arrive. After making this agreement, Ma'sum hastened to Ghora-ghat and won over Jabbari, Mirza Beg, and all the Kakshals. To give them a feeling of security, he left his family and children at their abodes. He himself, with a body of rebels, proceeded to the Kali-gang,³⁷ and there made ready for battle.

On the 9th Farwardin, the advanced force of the Imperial army made an easy capture of Garhi, which is the gate of that part of the country. The amirs pushed on, and, fortune favouring them, they, on the 16th, came in sight of the enemy, and arrayed their forces for action. They placed batteries on the banks of the Kali gang, and made ready their war boats. As the generals were apprehensive of an attack from Katlu, they detached 4000 horse, under the command of Wazir Khan, towards Balkana,

³⁷*Two copies write Kali-gang*

and this force went about twelve kos from the Imperial camp, to watch the movements of the enemy and guard against surprise

Skirmishes with muskets and bows went on and some valiant deeds were performed. But the idle talk and timid suggestions of ignorant people began to take effect upon the leaders of the army. The strength of the enemy's force was greatly exaggerated. So an application was made to the Emperor for reinforcements. The Emperor expressed his opinion that news of victory would soon arrive but he directed Mirza Khan, Zaim Khan Koka many others to march eastwards with additional forces. But before they were ready to march, intelligence arrived of victory and of the flight of the enemy.

The Imperial army had been lying nearly a month in face of the enemy and interchanges of cannonade and musketry went on daily. Deeds of valour were shown on either side but a panic at length fell upon the enemy, and the royal army obtained the victory on the 4th of the month. The enemy then fled and dispersed. While a warm action was going on, Kari-zada, a leading man among the rebels arrived from Fathabad, bringing with him many war-bows and supplies of munitions. He was struck dead by a cannon ball. Ma'sum Khan then ordered Kala Pihar a distinguished rebel, to take his place, but he soon met with the same fate. Dissensions arose among the enemy and Ma'sum Khan, the Kakshal clan, and Khalidin distrusted each other. The Imperial emirs took advantage of this disunion. Khalidin was first won over, and induced to take the oath of allegiance. Mirza Beg Kakshal and Jabbari also made terms, secretly engaging not to fight any more, and to proceed homewards. After a few days they came into the Imperial camp. The enemy being greatly downcast and discouraged, took to flight. 'Azam Khan endeavoured to pursue them, but his efforts were countervailed by the faint-hearted and frivolous objections of some of his officers. So the discomfited enemy made his escape. When the news of this victory reached the Court, orders were given to stop the march of the reinforcements.

Ma'sum, after his defeat, fled to the home of the Kakshals, in order to save his family and children from harm, now that there was ill-feeling between him and the Kakshals. Mirza Muhammad Kakshal received him in a friendly spirit, but the Kakshals in general had posted their forces about Ghora-ghat, and were prepared to fight Ma'sum plundered Ghora-ghat, and was about to attack the Kakshals. But Khan-i 'Azam sent with about 4000 horse, under the command of Tarsun Khan. He arrived, just as matters were going hard with the Kakshals, defeated the enemy, and drove him to Ghora-ghat. Mirza Beg, Khalidin, Wazir Jamil, and others renewed their promises, and went away from the royal camp.

After this defeat of Ma'sum Khan, the royal forces prepared to march against Katlu, but Khan-i 'Azam had suffered from the climate, and sought to be relieved of his command. The royal order was for one of the amirs to take command of the army and the management of the country for a few days, and either to return to Bihar or stay where they were. Shortly afterwards, on the 8th Khurdad, Shahbaz Khan was appointed to the command.

BURNING OF WIDOWS

(Text, vol. iii p. 395.) In the interior of Hindustan it is the custom, when a husband dies, for his widow willingly and cheerfully to cast herself into the flames (of the funeral pile), although she may not have lived happily with him. Occasionally love of life holds her back, and then the husband's relations assemble, light the pile, and place her upon it, thinking that they thereby preserve the honour and character of the family. But since the country had come under the rule of his gracious Majesty,

Imperial leaders had not resolution and enterprise enough to pursue, but came to a halt by the river

BURHANU-L MULK COMES TO COURT

(Text, vol iii p 401) Burhanu-l Mulk was the younger brother of Murtaza Nizamu-l Mulk. When Husam Nizamu-l died, the Nizamu-l Mulk kingdom descended to his eldest son, but in reality the government fell into the hands of the young prince's mother. He, like his father before him, preferred Burhan to all his friends. In course of time, designing persons stirred up strife between him and his relations, so that he seized and went to a fortress both his mother and his brother. His ignorance and vicious propensities kept him aloof from the loyal and good, and threw him into the company of evil persons, whose bad advice quite perverted his mind. He raised a low fellow, a cock-fighter named Husam, to be his companion, and foolishly gave him the title of Asaf Khan. This low-born fellow stirred up a war against Bidar, and a fierce struggle went on in Kandahar³⁹. The news of these foolish proceedings soon spread abroad, and Burhan, having escaped from prison by the aid of his keeper, began to raise disturbances, but his mind was in fetters, and his fortune asleep. He cast his eyes upon the wealth of others, and began to oppress them. When Nizamu-l Mulk was informed of this outbreak, he hastened back, and reached Ahmadnagar on the day he desired. Numbers of men deserted Burhan, and he was obliged to fly without fighting. He then went to 'Adil Khan at Bijanagar (sic). Not being able to effect anything there, he went in the disguise of a jogī to Ahmadnagar. There he lived in secret, and endeavoured to raise a party among the evil-disposed. Being discovered, he hastened to the governor of Baglana, and not being able to effect anything there, he went to Kutbu-d

³⁹Sixty miles north of Bidar

Shahbaz Khan sent a detachment under Muhibb 'Alī Khan to support Tarsun, and he himself quickly followed. The enemy then fled, and much spoil fell into the hands of the royal forces. Ma'sum Khan, knowing the crossing of the river to be a difficult operation, took up a position on the bank of the Jumna, opposite the Imperial army (Negotiations). Shahbaz Khan at length cut short the negotiations, and crossed the river mid a storm of arrows and bullets. The action soon grew warm, and the rebels were beaten, and put to flight, on the 4th Azar. The boats of the Imperial fleet did not arrive to take part in the fight, but Narain Būmī and Murad Kakshal brought up their vessels, and contributed to the victory. Muhibb 'Alī Khan was sent in pursuit of the fugitives, but a party of them rallied, and gave battle to the pursuers. Shahbaz, hearing of this check, marched on to retrieve it. Another sharp battle was fought, in which the enemy was again defeated, and (Ma'sum) Farankhudā was made prisoner. Much spoil was secured, and the foe fled in confusion. Mirza Beg, and Sangram, and Dalpat rendered effective assistance. The royal forces pursued the fugitives over rivers and through marshes to Ghora-ghat, which was once more plundered. Ma'sum Khan fled with a few followers to Bhatī, and Jabbarī to Kuch. About 150 men were taken prisoners.

TWENTY-NINTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Operations against Ma'sum Khan

[Text, vol. iii p. 432.] After the defeat of Ma'sum Khan, Shahbaz Khan went on after him towards Bhatī, regardless of the rains and the swollen rivers. 'Isa Khan, the ruler of that country, professed to be a loyal adherent of the Imperial throne. Shahbaz Khan now determined to test this by calling upon him to surrender Ma'sum Khan, resolving also to tear the veil from his face, and punish him if he refused. Bhatī is a low-lying country, and is called by that Hindi name⁴ because it lies lower than Bengal. It extends nearly 100 zow from east to west, and nearly 100 from south to north. On the east lies the sea and the country of Je ore, on the west lie the hill country south of Tanda,⁵ on the north the salt sea and the extremities of the hills of Tibet. The father of the chief of this country was a man of the Bus tribe of Rupas who used frequently to display his arrogance and brood out in rebellion. In the time of Salim Khan, Iq Khan and Darya Khan, four armies were sent into the country and after a severe struggle the chief was compelled to seek a truce. After a short time he again broke out in rebellion but was taken prisoner and put to death. His two sons, Isi and Ismail, were sold to merchants. When Salim Khan died and Iq Khan seized upon the country of Bengal, Kuth Khan the uncle of Isi, won distinction by his good service. By great exertions he brought the two brothers out of the country of Turan. Isi by his intelligence and prudence acquired a name and he made twelve zamindars of Bengal to become his dependents. By his foresight and adroitness he continually professed his allegiance to the rulers of Bengal and sent his tribute but he took care not to see them.

The army of Shahbaz Khan reached the banks of the Ganges near Khazipur. This is a place where there is a ferry over the river and consequently two strong forts had been built there, one on each side of the river. He soon made himself master of these strongholds and occupied the village of Samragmaw. Next he took Kauri

⁴⁰Bhathi, "down the stream"

⁴¹*Kuhstan banga karwa kuhan junub Tanda*. Perhaps "oaw" may be inserted before junub, it will then read "on the south Tanda." But the whole description is unintelligible—See Blochmann's Ain-i Akbari, vol. 1 p. 342

pur, where the magazines were, and plundered it. His army next marched rapidly to a large city called Mashhad, where great plunder was obtained. After this, they encamped on the shores of the Brahmaputra, which is a large river that flows from Khata. Ma'sum Khan fled before the advanced force, and took refuge in an island, being very nearly taken prisoner. Meantime 'Isa, who had been away in Kuch, arrived with a large force and excellent supplies. The Imperial officers then took post at Totak on the bank of the Brahmaputra, opposite the town of Kumara samundar, and fortified their position. They were warmly attacked, both by land and water, but on each occasion obtained a fresh victory. Tarsun Khan was now detached to distract the enemy, by menacing an attack upon their supplies at Bajrapur. There were two roads from Bhowal ⁴² one at a distance from the enemy's position, the other along the river bank pretty close to it. By the decree of fate, Tarsun Khan chose the latter route, and Ma'sum, being apprised of this, marched to attack him with a large force. Shahbaz Khan sent Muhibb 'Ali Khan and with swift messengers to apprise Tarsun of his danger, and to direct him to take up a strong position, and not to fight till he received reinforcements. On being informed that a force was approaching, Tarsun Khan, casting prudence aside, inferred that it was his reinforcements, and went forth to meet and welcome them. He had not proceeded far, when he discovered that they were enemies. His friends advised him to return to his camp, gather his own men around him, and wait for the reinforcements, but it was of no avail. With a bold and daring heart he prepared for the fight. Part of his followers left him, but with no more than fifteen who remained true, he gave battle. Two of his relatives were slain fighting bravely, and he him self was taken prisoner. Masum received him with a great show of kindness and friendship and endeavoured to win him over, but his advances were repulsed with scorn and reproof. This woke the narrow minded rebel from his dream and stirred up his wrath, so that he slew Tarsun Khan, full of years and of imperishable fame.

⁴²North of Dacca

KATLU KHAN

[Text, vol. iii p. 136] When Shahbaz Khan marched against Bhati, a force was sent under Wazir Khan to Burdwan, against Katlu. But the time was passed in doing nothing, until Sadik Khan arrived. He was an active and intelligent officer and soon worked a change. The rebel fled in shame to Orissa and the Imperial officers pursued him to Takarolu where he was so pressed that he was obliged to seek refuge in the forests of Dharmpur. Unwilling to molest him farther, and weary of the campaign, the amirs renewed to him the former offer of allowing him to remain ruler of Orissa, as a tributary of the Empire. He accepted the terms, sent his nephew to Court to express his allegiance and duty, and made an offering of sixty choice elephants.

SHAHBAZ KHAN'S FAILURE AT BHATI

[Text, vol. iii p. 437] Shahbaz Khan occupied a position on the Panar river, a branch of the Brahmaputra. Here he entered into negotiations with the rebels, in the expectation of being able to win them over to his views. 'Isa, received his propositions very respectfully, and for a time kept up communications. But it became apparent that his words and his intentions were not in unison, and so the war again began. For seven months the Imperial forces obtained victories from time to time, and the rebels were disheartened by failure. But Shahbaz Khan, in his self-conceit, had paid little regard to the feelings of the amirs in his army. They combined to thwart him, and ill-feeling waxed powerful. Death was busy among them, and their position became insupportable. The enemy knew that the Imperial army was dispirited, and although, by good fortune, there had been little rain, the men were listless and in low spirits. The enemy brought up a number of labourers, and cut the banks of the Brahmaputra in fifteen places, and turned the waters into the Imperial camp. When the batteries were flooded, they brought up to them large boats, called in the language of the country biyara. A fire of cannons and musketry was opened on both sides, and suddenly a great stroke of fortune happened to the Imperial forces, when a musket-ball from their ranks killed the commander of the assailants. Some of the boats came in collision, and suddenly the waters began to fall. This compelled them to take flight, and many of their men were drowned. They were defeated on all sides, except in the battery of Saiyid Husain, thanadar of Dacca, who was taken prisoner.

'Isa now awoke from his dream of ignorance, and opened communications through the medium of this prisoner. Shahbaz Khan received his overtures favourably, and Isa consented to submit to the supremacy of the Emperor, and to acknowledge himself a servant. The port of Sunarganw was to receive an Imperial darogha. Ma'sum was to be sent on the pilgrimage to Mecca, and tribute was to be transmitted to the Emperor. He won the hearts of the amirs by his munificent presents, and the royal army retired.

Shahbaz Khan crossed the river, and reached the confines of Bhowal, looking for the fulfilment of the agreement, but the mind of 'Isa had been perverted by evil counsellors. He now made new propositions and conditions, which led to sharp contentions. Preparations for renewing the war went on, and on the 19th Mīhr he offered battle. The amirs in the royal army were so short-sighted and weak in judgment, that they looked ardour On the 18th De, he entered Bengal, intent on the conquest of Bhati, and the rebels retreated before him On reaching the Jumna ¹³ he learnt that Ma'sum was at Sherpur, and did not expect that his opponents would cross the river Shahbaz Khan immediately determined to cross the river and advance, but the amirs dissented from his design However, he skilfully conveyed some troops over this great river, and immediately upon their approach the enemy fled, leaving many prisoners and much spoil behind them Sa'id Khan and went in pursuit of the enemy, who fell back as he approached After the country was clear of the rebels, the amirs returned to Sherpur Miraja

While the Imperial forces were at Sherpur, Ma'sum Khan proceeded towards Fathabad in Orissa, and Dastam Khan Kakshal also remained in that neighbourhood, in the hope that if the Imperial army were divided, he might find an opportunity of striking a blow, and before any intelligence was received about Ma'sum, this rebel (Dastam Khan) had overrun the country to within twelve kos of the Imperial camp A force was sent against him, before he retired (Dissensions of Shahbaz Khan and the amirs)

At length it was agreed that as the enemy had two armies, the Imperial forces should also be divided One under Wazir Khan and was to march against Ma'sum, while Shahbaz Khan and remained where they were to watch over and keep in check the rebels of that quarter

THIRTIETH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Rebels in Bengal

[Text, vol iii p 466] Ma'sum Khan, on hearing of the approach of the royal forces, made new preparations Having selected a strong position, he proceeded to erect

¹³See next note infra

fortifications at Taramhani, a place where the Ganges, the Jumna, and the Sakti unite⁴⁴ There he founded two forts When the Imperial amirs had made the needful preparations, the wary 'Isa endeavoured to make terms, but his proposals were not listened to The amirs resolved to attack the fortifications, and commenced operations, driving the enemy before them On the 21st Farwardin, one of the forts was assaulted and taken with the help of boats, and the other was captured on the following morning They then attacked Ma'sum, who, being unable to check their advance, made his escape by the river

While the amirs entertained expectations of 'Isa proving true to his engagements, they directed their attention towards Orissa, where Sulaiman Sarbani had broken out in revolt, and having gathered many Afghans around him, was plundering the country They attacked the son of Wazir Khan in the neighbourhood of Burdwan, and after a sharp action, compelled him to shut himself up in that place The Imperial amirs hastened to his relief, and the rebels being compelled to raise the siege, took up a position on the banks of the river Mangal kot⁴⁵ Sadik Khan attacked them, defeated them Three hundred of them fell in the action, and a thousand in the pursuit

At the time the Imperial amirs retired from Bengal to Bihar, Dastam Kakshal laid siege to Ghora-ghat Babu Mangali now came up from Sherpur Miraja, and compelled him to raise the siege

⁴⁴"Some leagues below Dacca, the river (Ganges) separates into two branches One, called Padmavati, runs eastward, and falls into the sea at Chittagong The other branch runs northward, and divides into three streams, called Sarsuti, Jumna, and Ganges"—Araishi Mahfil

⁴⁵Eighteen miles north of Burdwan

PACIFICATION OF BENGAL

[Text, vol iii p 490] When the Emperor marched to the Panjab, he received intelligence that Wazir was unable by himself to secure tranquillity in Bengal, and that the rebels were still active. Orders were accordingly sent to Shahbaz Khan, directing him to march from Bihar to Bengal. Although Shahbaz requested to be allowed to return to Court, messengers were sent to him with positive instructions to proceed on this duty. The messengers reached him at Jaunpur, and on the 20th Bahman, he proceeded to carry out his duties in Bengal. By conciliation and judicious encouragement he won over the rebels, so that they submitted and became peaceful. A detachment was sent to the country of Bhatī against 'Isa, and the territory abandoned by Sadik Khan was recovered. 'Isa humbly submitted, and sent presents to the Imperial Court. Ma'sum Khan had entered so deeply into rebellion, that he was afraid to present himself, but he offered to send his son in token of submission to the Imperial Court, while he himself lived quietly in seclusion. It was determined that the best thing he could do would be to proceed to Mecca, and afterwards go to Court. Many of the Afghans of Katlu left him and joined the royal forces. Katlu himself made specious representations, and Shahbaz Khan was simple enough to give back Orissa to him.

At this time, a force was detached against Kokra,⁴⁶ a flourishing country lying between Orissa and the Dakhin. Madhu Singh Būmī the chief, relying upon the difficulties of the approach over the mountains, offered resistance. The Imperial forces, however, made good their approach, overran the country and made it tributary.

⁴⁶*Kokra Khoorda?*

DEFEAT OF THE IMPERIAL FORCES—DEATH OF RAJA BIRBAL

[Text, vol iii p 494] When Kokaltash (Zain Khan) marched to effect the subjugation of Swad (Swat) and Bajaur, he first subdued Bajaur, in which he found 30,000 houses of the Yusufzai tribe. He then marched against Swat, in which mountain region there were 40,000 houses of the same tribe. On reaching the banks of the river, the natives made a strenuous resistance, and the advanced guard was checked for a time, but the braves of the altamsh went to their support, and the sight of their gallantry so encouraged the rest, that they fought bravely, and put the enemy to flight. Kokaltash built a fort at Jag-dara, in the midst of the country, and then applied himself to the chastisement of the enemy. Twenty-three times he was victorious, and he destroyed seven armies. All the country was brought under his hand, except the hills of Karagar and the country of Bunir. But his army was worn out with ascending mountains and continual fighting, he was in consequence compelled to ask for reinforcements. The Emperor sent Raja Birbal, Hakim Abu-l Fath, and other officers to support him. They had no sooner arrived, than dissensions arose among them. Hard words and fierce looks were exchanged between Kokaltash and the Raja. The Raja and the Hakim were also on ill terms with each other. When they reached the hills of Malkand, Kokaltash endeavoured to reconcile them, and they held a long debate as to the distribution of the various forces. Hakim Abu-l Fath hastened off with some forces to the fort of Jag-dara. The Raja was incensed at this separation, and nursed his angry feelings.

In the morning they met at the fort. Kokaltash prepared a feast, and invited his colleagues. But the Raja refused to attend, and sent to say, that the best thing to be done was for experienced men to meet and determine on the course to be pursued. Kokaltash repressed his anger, and went to the Raja. Other chiefs also went with him, and represented that it would be best to recognize Kokaltash as chief, and meet to consult at his abode. At this council the Raja and the Hakim spoke hotly, and then abused each other, but by the conciliatory conduct of Kokaltash, they were appeased. He then proposed that a force should be left to hold the fort, while the rest of the army marched against the enemy. He thought that the fresh forces might undertake this work, while he remained with the old force to protect the centre of the country, or if they preferred, they might remain at Jag-dara, while he went to chastise the mountaineers. The Raja and the Hakim rejected both propositions, and said it was the Emperor's desire, not that they should occupy the country, but that they should inflict chastisement on the enemy, and hasten back to Court. Kokaltash remonstrated that it was inexpedient to abandon a country which had been acquired with such difficulty, that the attempt to return through the defiles of the mountains would be rash. If they would not agree to either course he had proposed, and were determined to return, the best plan would be to proceed by the way they had come, for that was practicable for an army, and the enemy could not stop them. They adhered to their own proposition, and Kokaltash weakly put aside his duties as a general, lest his associates should convey their complaints to the Emperor, and excite his displeasure. They were afraid that if they marched separately, their attempts would fail, and they would incur disgrace, so fate had its way, and the word was given for the march of the whole army, and the Raja and the Hakim received the command of the right and left wing.

On the 2nd Islandarmuz, they marched from Jag-dara towards Karagar, and having proceeded five kos, they halted at the village of Kandak. Next day the road was full of defiles, and the right wing was left as a rear-guard, while the halt was made half a kos in advance. The advance guard was to skirmish a little in front for that day, and then fall back. Next morning, when the advance entered the pass, the fight began. The Imperial forces were successful in several encounters, and in a short time carried the pass, and captured some booty. Thousands were lured into this snare. The altamish, also, hearing the cry of plunder, hastened to share it, and large numbers of the main body broke and hastened forward. Kokaltash, who had chosen the camping ground, when he advanced and came in front of the Afghans, found the troops engaged in plundering. Hasan Khan Tabati was carried off wounded, and matters looked very serious. Kokaltash, on learning this, engaged in the fight, and made a firm stand. That day and that night and the early part of the next day, the battle went on. Kokaltash shot four of the enemy's chiefs with his own hands, and the foe was for a time repulsed. The close of the day brought victory, but the baggage of the camels and oxen had been plundered. That which was carried by elephants and mules came up.

Next day they advanced six kos, near to Khanpur, and there halted. Kokaltash himself took the command of the rear, and fighting all the way, reached the camping ground. He then repaired to the Raja, to consult with him as to what course was to be taken, blaming the movements that had been made, and eloquently exposing his own views. As the distance before them was now diminished, and the rugged nature of the way was not visible, the general opinion was, that they should leave the hills and rest for a few days until a plan could be formed for overpowering their adversaries. Kokaltash represented that the ground in front of them was most difficult, and it was utterly futile to attempt it. His own opinion was, that they should stay where they were for a while and defend themselves. The space was sufficiently large, there was no danger of the foe gaining a position to command it, there was abundance of water and grass, and plenty of wood to build stockades they might thus inflict chastisement on the fierce foes who held all the hills around. Else they might send and endeavour to make peace, by restoring the prisoners and booty they had taken, on condition of receiving hostages. Or, they might wait for a while, until news of their position reached the Emperor, and he sent an army to seize the hills from that side. But fate had ordained it otherwise. They held to their own views, and thought they saw their safety in what was to be their ruin.

On the 6th Isfandarmuz, they marched towards the lofty mountain of Bulandrai. Kokaltash wisely took command of the rear. The fighting began again more fiercely than before. When they had made some little way, and evening came on, finding a lofty mountain before them, they came to a halt. On Kokaltash coming up, it became clear that there was another defile to pass before they could be safe. As this was governed by heights close at hand, he made haste to push forward. The advance guard was ordered to ascend the heights and clear the commanding positions, then to come down again at a distance, and at the early dawn show the way over this difficult mountain. When they were repulsed by the Afghans, Kokaltash with a party of braves rallied them, but others hastened to fall back, and all order was lost. Although Kokaltash exerted himself to re-assure them and restore order, it was all in vain. The Afghans attacked them fiercely on every side with arrows and stones, and they were driven from the heights in disorder and dismay. At the bottom, elephants, horses, and men, were all mixed together in confusion. There many brave and noble men made a bold stand, and sold their lives. One party, having found a passage, made their escape, and at the close of the day another party made their way over the rugged mountain. Kokaltash was with this party. In the conflict he had resolved to sell his life, but a brave friend seized his rein, and dragged him out of the fight. At length he reached the camp on foot, through a hundred difficulties. Scared and foolish men raised the cry that the Afghans were upon them. So, in the greatest distress, they moved on from that place at an unseasonable hour. In the darkness many lost their way and fell down precipices. The Afghans stayed behind securing and dividing the plunder.

Next day many of the wanderers perished, and some were made prisoners. In this conflict 500 men perished.⁴⁷ Among them was Rāja Birbal whose loss the Emperor greatly deplored.

THIRTY-FIRST YEAR OF THE REIGN

(Conquest of Bīr)

[Text, vol. iii p. 503.] Bīr is a Rajput state adjoining the country of Malwa. The rulers of the Dakhīn did not pay proper obedience to the Imperial Government, so Khan-i 'Azam Mirza Koka received orders to march with a great many other amirs, to inflict punishment upon them. He proceeded to Hindia, to make preparations for the campaign, and a force which he sent in advance took Sanwaligarh from Nahir Rao. Other zamindars made offers of submission. But dissensions suddenly arose among the amirs of the Imperial army. The commander gave grants in Malwa to his own adherents and the amirs who had been sent on the campaign had great altercations with him, so that divisions arose, and the work of the campaign was arrested. Shahabu-d din Ahmad Khan went off in anger to his jagir, and instead of lending assistance, prepared for opposition. By the exertions of prudent men, a conflict was prevented, but the two amirs would not work together Tolak Khan, one of the principal amirs, was thrown into prison on a false charge Amir Fathu-lla Shirazi received many annoyances, and retired before the ruler of Khandesh, to seek refuge with Khan-khanan in Gujrat By unnecessary delays and dispersion of the troops, the Imperial army in a short time dwindled down, and the enemy, who before had trembled, now grew bold Raja Ali Khan of Khandesh and assembled the forces of Birar and Ahinadnagar, and advanced to give battle The royal amirs now awoke from their dream, and endeavoured to form some plan, but did not know friend from foe, and could not distinguish between supporters and opponents Vacillation and discordant counsels made all hope of unity and resistance vain, so they retired before the enemy towards Birar, leaving their baggage On their march, they put their guide, Hathya Rao Bumi to death, upon suspicion of treachery From want of proper information, a force was sent into an intricate country, near Kherla, and suffered great loss. Finding Birar unoccupied, they plundered it, and on New Year's Day they sacked Ellichpur, the capital of the country One party was for going off to Ahmadnagar, another for trying to hold the country This proposition was not listened to, and so they moved off with their plunder towards Gujarat When the enemy got intelligence of the retreat, he left his artillery and heavy baggage, and marching quickly against Hindia, he plundered and burnt that town The Khan-i 'Azam went off express to Gujarat, to seek the aid of the forces under Khan-khanan

⁴⁷*This must mean one particular episode of the battle, for according to the Tabakat nearly 8000 men fell. See Extract from the Zubdatu-t tawarikh, post, Elphinstone, book ix chap. 11.*

THIRTY-FIFTH YEAR OF THE REIGN
Europeans at Court

[Text, vol iii p 602] At this time, Padre Farmaliun⁴⁸ arrived at the Imperial Court from Goa, and was received

⁴⁸*Farmaliun, according to original Persian* with much distinction. He was a man of much learning and eloquence. A few intelligent young men were placed under him for instruction, so that provision might be made for securing translations of Greek books and of extending knowledge. With him came a number of Europeans and Armenians, who brought silks of China and goods of other countries, which were deemed worthy of his Majesty's inspection.

ORISSA

[Text, vol. iii p. 604] Raja Man Singh, the ruler of Bihar, had, by his ability, reduced that province to tranquillity, and punished the rebels. So towards the end of the year, he had formed the design of invading Orissa by way of Jharkand. He halted at Bhagalpur, and there sent to ask for the co-operation of Sa'id Khan, the governor of Bengal, who, in consequence of the near approach of the rainy season, postponed his assistance. At the beginning of the present year the Raja marched by way of Bardwan, and he was accompanied by Bihar Khan and others, with artillery from Bengal. He halted at Jahanabad till the rains should be over, and Sa'id Khan and others should come to support him. But Katlu had raised his banner in Orissa, and now boldly advanced to Dharpur, twenty-five kos from the Imperial army, with the intention of giving battle. He sent forward Bahadur with a numerous force to Raipur, and to check this force the Raja advanced a detachment under the command of Jaggat Singh. The rebel was obliged to take refuge in fortifications, and then submissively offered to treat, but he, at the same time, artfully called upon Katlu for support. Katlu sent men to his assistance. Jaggat Singh was warned of his danger, but paid no heed. At length he was attacked by the rebels, and was obliged to fly and abandon his camp, but he was saved by Hamu, the zamindar who had given him warning, and conducted to Bishanpur. Upon learning of this reverse, Raja Man

Singh held a council, and the prevailing opinion was, that it was desirable to retreat to Salimabad, where the families of his troops were, and there to reorganize his army. But the Raja rejected these counsels, and resolved upon taking the offensive. The Imperial good fortune now came to his aid, and the rebel Katlu died, after an illness of ten days. His younger son succeeded him, but the Afghans sued for an arrangement. The excessive rains and the depression of the royal forces made a settlement desirable. It was accordingly agreed that the Emperor's name should be used in the khutba and on the coins, that the country should be obedient and loyal, that Jagganath, the celebrated place of worship, should, with its dependencies, become subject to the royal exchequer, and that no injury should be done to the loyal zamindars. All of them, with craft and dissimulation, affixed their signatures to this document. On the 4th Shahryur, Katlu's son was brought in, with 150 elephants and many valuable articles, which were offered as tribute. Raja Man Singh then returned to Bihar.

THIRTY-SIXTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Burhanu-l Mulk

[Text vol III p 612] When Burhanu-l Mulk made his first attempt on the territory of the south, and was unsuccessful, he returned to his estates. Now that Khan-i 'Azam had gone to Gujarat, and Shahbaz Khan was dead, he betook himself to Raja 'Alī Khan, the ruler of Khandesh, who, in compliance with the Imperial commands, was eager to assist him. He had also agreed with 'Adil Khan, of Bijapur, that a force should be sent from thence when they approached Ahmadnagar, and accordingly a contingent was sent to the frontier, to await the arrival of Raja 'Alī's army. Jamal Khan, the governor of Ahmadnagar, resolved to prevent the junction of the two forces. Before Burhanu-l Mulk came near, Jamal Khan defeated his son Ismail, and then hastened to attack the forces of Bijapur, and defeated them with little difficulty. When, after this, Burhanu-l Mulk entered Birar, Muhamadu-l Mulk and other chiefs joined him. Jamal Khan, inflated with his previous victory, marched out rashly to oppose him. Raja Ali Khan placed Burhanu-l Mulk in charge of the amirs of Birar, and gave battle to Jamal Khan. A sharp fight ensued, but Jamal Khan was killed by a musket-shot, and his army was broken up. A great victory was gained. Soon after, Ismail Khan, the son, was brought in a prisoner, and was placed in confinement. The ruler of Khandesh then led a detachment to Ahmadnagar, and soon made himself master of the whole country.

When Burhanul Mulk got possession of Ahmadnagar, he had a fine opportunity of showing his gratitude and fidelity, and of making himself an example to other rulers. But the intoxication of success got the mastery over him. He forgot the many and great favours he had received, oppressed the people under him, and sought his own advantage in the wrongs of others. The Emperor determined to send first an envoy to Raja 'Ali Khan, who had raised Burhan to the position he held, to consult with him, and the other rulers of that quarter, as to whether they would invade his territories. If they agreed, the ambassador was to return, if not, an Imperial army was to be sent. Shaikh Abul Faiz Faizi, "the prince of poets," was accordingly sent to Raja Ali Khan and Burhanu-l Mulk.

THIRTY SEVENTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Conquest of Orissa

[Text, vol. iii p. 640] This country had always been governed by independent rulers. Among them was one named Partab Rao, whose son, Nar Singh, strove against him, and took an opportunity of poisoning him. Mukund Deo, a native of Telingana, and a servant of the late Raja, rose up in opposition to the new ruler. Upon the pretence that his wife was going to pay a visit to the usurper, he sent a number of dulis, filled with arms, and a number of active men as ostensible guards of his tribute. They were admitted into the fort, and soon put an end to the usurper. Although it was the rule and custom that new rulers should not expend the treasures accumulated by their predecessors, Mukund broke open seventy chests, and appropriated their contents. He was very liberal in the use of them, but his act alienated the feelings of the people.

When Sikandar Khan Uzbek left the Imperial service and joined Sulaiman Kirani, the latter sent his son, Bayazid, by way of Jharkand, the Benares of that country, against Orissa, and he sent Sikandar with him. The Raja sent two of his chiefs to oppose him, but many of their men were lured by money to desert them and abandon their master. Some fighting followed, in which Mukund and his general Ishat Rai were killed. Power then fell into the hands of Rakh Banj (?), but Sulaiman got him into his power, and made an end of him. He then established his power over the whole country.

In the time of Khan-khanan Mun'im Khan and Khan-jahan, a large portion of this country had been brought under the Imperial rule, but through the incompetency of the amirs it had been wrested from them by Katlu Lohani. When Katlu died, and Raja Man Singh withdrew his forces, as before related, his course was disapproved by many wise men, but a treaty was patched up. The evil spirits of the country now strove to overthrow each other, but so long as Katlu's vakil 'Isa lived, the treaty was observed. When he died, the turbulent Afghans seized upon the temple of Jagannath, and plundered the county of Hamu, who had proved himself loyal.

Raja Man Singh regretted the treaty he had formerly made, and projected another campaign, for which he received the Imperial permission. The forces of Bengal and Bihar were named for the service. On the 23rd Aban he set off by water but Iqbal Khan and the other amirs proceeded by land. Madhu and Lakhi Rai and other zamindars were sent by way of Jharkhand under the command of Yusuf Khan the ruler of Kashmir. When the army reached Bengal Said Khan the ruler of the province was ill but as the business was urgent the Raju pushed on without him. When Said recovered he followed the army and joined it with many chiefs and 6500 horse. A great part of the country was occupied. The crafty Afghans sought to make peace, but experience had shown what their professions were worth, and a deaf ear was turned to their propositions though some of the amirs of Bengal were in favour of an amicable settlement. The enemy took up a position in the forests of Midnapur a place in the middle of Orissa (Disposition of the royal forces). On the 9th Farwardin Raju Man Singh ordered an advance. The enemy then crossed the river, and set their forces in array. Their centre under the command of Nasib Khan and Jund Khan sons of Kutlu consisted of 3000 horses and twenty-five elephants. In the wings were 2000 horse and twenty-five elephants and in their advance were 1200 horse and eight elephants. Battle was joined and was well contested the result being for some time doubtful. But victory declared in favour of the Imperial forces. The Afghans had 300 men killed and the royal army lost forty men.

CAPTURE OF JUNAGARH

[Text, vol. iii p. 651] When Khan-i 'Azam had established his authority in Gujarat, he resolved to extend his sway, and to bring more of that region under his rule. At first he was impeded by the timidity of his followers, but after they had rested and recovered their spirits he renewed his projects. Somnat, Koka, Manglor, Mahu Paro and seventeen other places fell into his hands without a struggle. He then resolved upon the conquest of Junagarh This was a renowned fort in the country of Surath, and was held by the grandsons of Amin Khan Former rulers had been able to make no impression upon it On the 23rd Khurdad, his army reached the vicinity, and seventeen batteries were raised round the lofty fortress Nur Beg Khan and some others were detached to check the Kathis, who were rendering assistance to the besieged A great fire broke out in the fortress, causing much destruction, and the European artillery officer, who had embraced the Muhammadan religion, fell dead into the fosse This greatly encouraged the assailants But the garrison had abundant supplies, and were confident in the strength of the place They had a hundred guns, some of which discharged balls of one man and a half and these they fired several times daily Khan-i 'Azam at length placed some mortars on an eminence commanding the fortress, and opened fire upon it This distrusted the confidence of the garrison, and a capitulation was proposed The siege had lasted three months, but the keys were given up on the 7th Shahryur In all, fifty seven persons of distinction surrendered, all of whom were honourably treated, and received honorary dresses and jagirs

THIRTY-EIGHTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Preparations for the Invasion of the Dakhn

[Text, vol iii p 683] The expostulations and advice addressed to Burhanu-l Mulk made no impression him, so the Emperor resolved to proceed to Agra to organize a force for service in the Dakhn On the 25th Mihr, Prince Daniyal was directed to march thitherwards Khan-khanan Rai Singh, and many other nobles, with treasure, artillery, and elephants were ordered to accompany him Shah Rukh Mirza, Shahbaz Khan and other chiefs of Malwa, were ordered to join with their forces Raja Man Singh was also directed to march from Bengal, if that province could be safely left Prince Sultra Murad was instructed to prepare to take part in the campaign. At the town of Shulhuput Khair Khan was summoned to an audience and he then represented that the most favourable time for an invasion of the Dakhn was after the end of the rains when grain and fodder might be procured in abundance. So Prince Derwal was recalled and the Emperor resolved to head the expedition himself at the conclusion of the rains. Khair Khan was directed to proceed to Agra there to collect and organise the forces and the Emperor returned to Agra.

FOURTH YEAR OF THE 1110 He. let. ee. 10. 30. 1. 1. end. Bysp.

[Fest. vol. ii. p. 71.] Since the time when the Emperor withdrew his personal attention from the Dakhn fresh misfortunes had fallen upon that country and discontent grew ripe. Nizamul Mulk Barhan was dead and his son Ibrahim who succeeded him took to evil course. An army marched from Bhatpur against him and on the 16th Annurud a battle was fought about forty miles from Ahmednagar in which he was killed by an arrow. The Bhatpur army returned triumphant and the Nizamul mulk's forces were scattered abroad.

INVASION OF THE DAKHNS

[Fest. vol. ii. p. 71.] Prince (Murad) in pursuance of orders now prepared for the invasion of the Dakhn but Khair Khan was delayed by the tardy gathering of his men. Before he joined some little discussion had sprung up between them. The Prince's desire was that the heads of the army should all join him and proceed by that road (from Gujarat) to the Dakhn. It was the opinion of the commander-in-chief (Khair Khan) that he should advance from Malwa. As their opinions did not agree the Prince, on the 20th Aban marched from Ahmedabad and rested awhile at Broach in expectation of getting more men On the 22nd Khurdad, he left Broach Khan-khanan remained for some time at Bhilsa, which was in his ikta, to assemble his forces On the 9th Amurdad, he marched for Ujjain This greatly incensed the Prince, who sent him an angry message He wrote in reply that he would join the Prince's army as soon as he had received the promised contingent from the ruler (marzban) of Khandesh, the Prince might meanwhile enjoy the pleasures of the chase in Gujarat The Prince was enraged with this reply, and his flatterers fanned his anger He marched with his army towards Ahmadnagar

The chief nobles, and Raja 'Alī Khan, were inclined to the Prince, and when Khan-khanan became aware of this, he left his army, artillery, and elephants with Mirza Shah Rukh and other amirs while he started off express with Raja Alī Khan (to meet the Prince) On the 19th Azar he met the Prince at the fort of Chand, thirty kos from Ahmadnagar The meeting was not cordial After a great deal of talk, a darbar was held When the army moved, there was no unity of feeling Khan-khanan, with his numerous force, was offended, and kept aloof from the management of the business Sadik Khan brought up an old grievance which he had against Shahbaz Khan, and rarely went to the darbar On the 8th Dc, the army encamped half a kos from the city, and on that day Khan-khanan and Shahbaz Khan went to the city (ba shahr raftand) Through their negligence an attack was made upon the baggage of the army, which was with difficulty repelled, and the people of the city were encouraged by the evident signs of dissension On the 8th, the fortress was invested Chand Bibi, sister of Burhan, prepared for resistance As they had carried off Ahmad,⁴⁰ the son, ⁴⁰*Ahmad Shah, who claimed to be of royal descent, had been raised to the throne An opposite faction had set up Moti, a bazar boy, and he having been taken prisoner Ikhlas Khan procured another child who was* Ikhtas Khan came to Ahmadnagar with Moti and being defeated fled to Pattan.

When the royal army approached Manjuli (the - azri) carried off Ahmad with a portion of the treasure and some of the elephants to Bijapur but he was nearly taken prisoner. From want of proper munitions the siege was protracted. Chand Bibi was afraid of being taken prisoner but being informed of the condition of the assailants she was encouraged to defend the city. On the 9th Shih Ali and Abhang Khan made a night attack in force upon the battery of Khan Mahan, but the defenders fought bravely, killed many of the assailants and repelled the attack. If the repulse had been followed up, the pursuers might have entered the fort with the fugitives, and the place would have fallen.

The close blockade and scarcity of provisions were taking effect on the garrison. On the 14th, an unsuccessful attack was made upon the camp. On the 16th a caravan from Gujarat came near, and was plundered by Saadat Khan. On the 19th, Sher Khwaja, Shrikh Daulat, Kamran Beg and Daulat Khan were sent with a force towards Pattan. They inflicted a defeat on Ikhtas Khan, and secured great booty. Then, eager for further plunder, they pillaged the inhabitants of Pattan, a city which had received letters of protection. On the 11th Isfandarmuz, a portion of the wall was broken down. A mine was carried from the battery of the Prince, and a hole cleared out under the wall. It was filled with powder and exploded, when it brought down about thirty gaz of the wall. The troops were ready for the assault, but another mine, which had been carried under the wall from the battery of Shahbaz Khan, was discovered by the garrison and emptied. From fear of a disaster like that which occurred at Chitor, the storming party was held back, and such a delay occurred, that the daylight passed away, and during the night the garrison repaired the breach. But the garrison was greatly disheartened by the activity of the besiegers, and now proposed an accommodation. They offered to elevate Bahadur, son of Burhanul Mulk, to the throne, with the title of Nizamu-l Mulk, and as a vassal of the Imperial throne. The territory of Ahmadnagar was to be confirmed to him, and the province of Birar given up to the Emperor. Jewels, the pick of the elephants, and other things were to be sent as tribute to the Emperor. Notwithstanding the desperate state of the place, and the scarcity of provisions, these unworthy terms were agreed to and a treaty was concluded on the 17th Isfandarmuz.

also called Moti—Briggs, Firishla, vol. ii, p. 270, vol. iii pp. 291, 292

FORTY-FIRST YEAR OF THE REIGN

Famine

[Text, vol. III p. 744] In the year there was little rain, and the price of rice rose high. Celestial influences were unpropitious, and those learned in the stars announced dearth and scarcity. The kind-hearted Emperor sent experienced officers in every direction, to supply food every day to the poor and destitute. So, under the Imperial orders, the necessitous received daily assistance to their satisfaction, and every class of the indigent was entrusted to the care of those who were able to care for them.

DEFEAT OF THE DAKHIN CONFEDERATES

[Text, vol. III p. 764] The Ahmadnagar affair, and other unfortunate matters, had brought disgrace upon the armies of the Dakhin, and made their leaders desirous of retrieving their fortunes, by contending against the Imperial forces. Shah Murad was at the head of the royal army, and was desirous of giving battle, but the experienced amirs objected, and continued their opposition, until Mirza Shah Rukh was appointed commander-in-chief, and Khan Khanan and other distinguished officers were named for different duties. The military chest, the elephants and the artillery were carefully looked after and everything properly arranged. Mirza Shah Rukh and Khan-i-Human commanded the centre. The army marched from Shalpur and took up a position twelve fos from Pathan.

The enemy also prepared for battle. The army of Nizam-ul Mulk was in the centre, the Adil khans were on the right and the army of Kumbhal Mull on the left. On the 28th Bahman after the first watch of the day, the river Gang (Godavari) was passed and the battle began by an attack on the right wing of the enemy. But they held their ground firmly in a strong position and kept up a heavy fire. Great bravery was exhibited on both sides and a long and desperate struggle was maintained. The enemy was numerous, and the superiority of his fire checked the Imperial ranks and made them waver. Jagganath and several other Rajputs drew rent and did not move while the Adil Khan troops made an onslaught upon Raja 'Ali Khan of Khandesh. He made a stubborn resistance, and fell fighting bravely with thirty-five distinguished officers and 500 devoted followers.

Mirza Shah Rukh and Khan-i-Human had been successful in their part of the field, so also had Sayid Karam and other leaders. The enemy was under the impression that the ruler of Khandesh was in the centre, and thought that Mirza Shah Rukh and Khan-i-Human were involved in his defeat. During the darkness of the night, the opposing forces remained separate from each other, each supposing that it had gained a victory. In the course of the night many of the scattered troops rejoined their standards. Under the impression that Raja 'Ali Khan, of Khandesh, had gone over to the enemy, the Imperial troops plundered his baggage. Dwarika Das of the advance, and Sayid Jalal of the left, retired to Nilawa. Ram Chandar, who had fought bravely, and had received twenty wounds with the forces/under Raja 'Alī Khan remained among the wounded during the night, and died a few days after

When morning came, the Imperial forces, 7000 in number, found themselves in face of 25,000 of the enemy. They had all night suffered from thirst, and they now carried the river Sugam. The enemy was only half-hearted, and being dismayed by this demonstration took to flight, and made but little resistance. Worn out by the protracted conflict, the Imperial forces were unable to pursue. At the beginning of the campaign, the Imperial forces numbered only 15,000, while the enemy were 60,000 in number. Still they had gained this great victory, and had captured forty elephants and much artillery.

FORTY-THIRD YEAR OF THE REIGN

Abul Fazl Sent To The Dakhn

[Text, vol iii p 802] On His Majesty's return from the Panjab, he formed the design of marching direct to the south without visiting his capital. But his mind was disturbed by the non-arrival of the Princes, and many idle stories were reported to him. So he halted, resolving to make a politic delay, and he again summoned the Princes to his presence. On the 25th of the month, the author of this work received orders to proceed to the Dakhn, and to bring Prince Sultan Murad to Court. If the amirs of the Dakhn were willing to undertake the management of the country, the author was to leave it in their hands, and return with the prince, but if otherwise, he was to send the Prince to Court, and to remain and associate himself with the other officers in supporting Mirza Shah Rukh. A banner and kettle-drums were given to the Mirza, and the province of Malwa was assigned to him, so that he might be able to raise and equip an army in his own province, and return to the Dakhn when called upon.

DAULATABAD

[Text, vol iii p 803] At the beginning of Isfandarmuz, the fort of Lohgarh, at Daulatabad in the Dakhin, was taken. Mirza 'Alī Beg Akbarshahī besieged it for a month, and want of provisions and water compelled the garrison to surrender and give up the keys.

FORTY-FOURTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Kherla and Nasik

[Text, vol iii p 805] In this year the fort of Kherla in Birar, lying between Birar and Gondwana, was obtained by capitulation on the 13th Aban, the garrison being short of provisions. The fort of Nasik near Ahmadnagar, was taken soon after.

DEATH OF PRINCE SULTAN MURAD

[Text, vol iii p 806] Alas, that wine should be burdened with suffering, and that its sweet nectar should be a deadly poison! On the 17th Urdibihisht, near Dihbari, on the banks of the Purta, twenty kos from Daulatabad, Prince Sultan Murad's fits took a grave character, and on the 22nd he became insensible and died.

FORTY-FIFTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Asir

[Text, vol iii p 837] On the 22nd Isfandarmuz, Khan-i 'Azam Asaf Khan, Shaikh Farid, and the writer of this work were directed to invest the fortress of Asir, and to construct batteries round it. But the force which was sent on this service, under the command of Shaikh Farid, was very small compared with the numbers of the enemy, so it was deemed prudent to halt at the three kos from the fortress. Some inexperienced and mischievous persons excited the Emperor's anger at this resolution. But the writer went to visit him, and explained the true state of affairs, and his anger was soon appeased. On the same day the author was appointed to take charge of the province of Khandesh Thereupon he established twenty-two stations in the province, and to each he appointed a responsible officer To one he appointed his brother Shaikh Abu-l Barakat, with some experienced subordinate officers, to another his son Shaikh 'Abdur Rahman In a short time the refractory were brought to obedience, many others gladly became subjects of the Emperor The soldiery submitted peacefully, and the peasantry applied themselves to the work of cultivation

BENGAL

[Text, vol iii p 828] Disturbances now broke out in the province of Bengal, through the imprudence of Raja Man Singh, who, although he was absent in the province of Ajmir, kept the government of Bengal in his own hands, thinking that all would go on quietly, and according to his wish 'Usman, Shujawal, and other Afghans, broke out in rebellion Maha Singh and Partab Singh made light of this, and attacked them at Bhadrak, but were defeated The province was not lost, but the rebels got possession of some places

DISOBEDIENCE OF PRINCE SALIM

[Text, vol iii p 831] Salim, the Prince Royal, had been sent against the Rana (of Udipur) His love of ease, encouraged by his improper companions, induced him to spend some time at Ajmir in pleasure After a while, he hastened to Udipur, and the Rana then leading his forces in another direction, plundered Balpur and other places Madho Singh was sent against him, and defeated him But before this honourable service was accomplished, the Prince was induced by his evil counsellors to form the design of going to the Panjab, and of there following his own pleasure But just at this time came the outbreak of the Afghans in Bengal, and upon the advice of Raja Man Singh, he proceeded thither On of Abhang's lost heart, and dispersed without making any resistance. On the 2nd Urdilphisht, the various intrenchments were assigned to the various amirs. Chand Bibi was for abiding by the treaty. Several of the leading men in the fortress then took matters into their own hands, and made several unsuccessful sorties. Under the direction of the Prince, great efforts were made to form a khak-rez,⁵¹ to fill up the ditch and reach to the walls. This was from thirty to forty gaz broad, and seven gaz deep (zharfa). The wall was of bluish stone, and twenty-seven gaz high. Mines were formed from the trenches of the Prince and Mirza Yusuf Khan, but the besieged broke into them, and filled them up again. They even formed a counter-mine from the inside and exploded it, but it was smothered by the khak-rez and did not damage there. The shock split a bastion of the fortress. When this was discovered, efforts were made to clear out the chasm, and this being effected, 180 mans of gunpowder were placed therein. On the 6th Shahryur, it was exploded. The bastion and thirty gaz of the wall was blown into the air. The garrison suffered from the falling stones, but not a particle of stone fell on the besiegers. Through the breach rushed the assailants, and another party made their way in from the intrenchments of Mirza Yusuf Khan. Fifteen hundred of the garrison were put to the sword, the rest were saved by the solicitations of their friends Bahadur, son of Ibrahim and grandson of Burhan, who had been set up as Nizamu-l Mulk, was taken prisoner. Very valuable jewels, embossed arms, a splendid library, fine silks and twenty-five elephants, were among the booty. The guns and ammunition exceeded all compute. The siege was carried on during the rainy season, but by great good fortune there was no flooding to interrupt the construction of the Khak-iez. The day after the victory, heavy rain commenced. The siege lasted four months and four days.

⁵¹Johnson explains this as "the foot of a wall," but the words mean literally "earth-spreading," and the text makes it clear that it signifies the filling in of the ditch, and the levelling up of dirt against the walls.

DEATH OF JALALA THE SECTARY²

[Text, vol iii p 835] A party of Lohanis who had come to Ghazni upon business had been attacked from an ambush by the Hazaras. After seven days' fighting, they were compelled by thirst to retire, and they then sought the aid of Jalala. He went with them into Ghazni, in the disguise of a merchant. When they were attacked by the men of Sharif Khan, and by the rayals, Jalala tried to get them back again to their homes. Again the Hazaras fell upon them and scattered them abroad. Jalala was wounded and carried to the hills, where he was put to death by Murad Beg and other intelligent men.

DISTURBANCES IN THE DAKHIN

[Text, vol iii p 844] Although Ahmadnagar had fallen to the Imperial arms, a scarcity of grain soon after weakened their power, the malcontents again assembled, and broke out in rebellion. They placed at their head 'Alī, son of Shah 'Alī, and uncle of Murtaza Nizamul Mulk Khan-khanan was therefore appointed to take command at Ahmadnagar, and the writer of this history was sent to Nasik.

FORTY-SIXTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

[Text, vol iii p 849] The writer of this history was held back from going to Nasik, and marched against the son of Shah 'Alī, which was deemed to be more important In Isfandarmuz in the preceding year, he had joined Khan-khanan, near Baranganw But intelligence was brought that one of the great vassals of 'Adil Khan Bijapuri was coming towards Ahmadnagar with 5000 horse and 12,000 foot The Khan deemed it necessary to watch his proceedings, so he proceeded to Jalna pur, and left the author to march against the son of Shah 'Ali On the 27th the author reached the banks of the Ganga (Godavari) On the 29th he got possession of the fort of Kalna, which is one of the chief fortresses of Ahmadnagar

⁵²Jalala is generally called tariki 'sectary' Chalmers, in his MS translation, read the word as "Tajik," and strange to say, Elphinstone has adopted that word in one of his notes. Jalala's followers, as Elphinstone shows, were Yusufzais, not Tajiks.

'Ali Maidan Khan, the commander of the Imperial forces, was defeated and taken prisoner in Telingana

The author's efforts were thereupon directed to the repression of this outbreak, and he sent his son with 1200 horse against the enemy On the 6th Khurdad, he defeated them with a loss of 400 killed and many wounded

IAKMHAT-UL-AKBAR-NAMA

or

INAYATULLAH

This is the autograph of the Ihtisat containing the four remaining years of Akbar's reign. It was composed by Shakh Inayatullah and is sometimes met with bound up with the Ihtisat 1592.

(The above is all that has been found, and Mr. Sir H. M. Elliot's opinion concerning this. Completion of the Ihtisat 1592. There is no copy of the work in his library, and not a page of translation. The work seems to be almost unknown in England, for it is not to be found in the Libraries of the British Museum, the East India Office, or the Royal Asiatic Society. A translation of the whole work is given at the end of the MS. translation of the Ihtisat belonging to the Royal Asiatic Society, already noticed elsewhere supra. It is the work of Lieut. Chalmers of the Madras Army, and was used by Hphinstone. The following extracts are taken from this translation, and may be accepted as accurate.)

Nothing more has been learnt of the work or its author than what he tells us in the following pages. It will be seen from the conclusion that he calls himself "Inayatullah or Muhammad Sahib.")

EXTRACTS

The most admirable command of His Most High Majesty was issued to this effect that as the Ihtisat name was still unfinished and Abul Fizz was no more, and had not attained the happiness of completing this noble record, this humble individual (Inayatullah) should relate the annals of four years which remained unchronicled. And as the second volume of the Shahih was both deficient in beauty of style, and contained many obsolete words unintelligible to the generality of mankind, a point which was not approved of, he was further directed to arrange his diction and phraseology after the model of the first volume, so that his meaning, though wonderful and sublime, should be clad in the familiar garb of common language, and that it might thus be understood and commended by small and great. My hope is, that by obedience to this mandate, the morning of success and complacency may dawn upon me, and that I may thus secure an ample stock of approbation and advancement!

FORTY-SEVENTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

This year commenced on Thursday, the 27th Ramazan

About this time, a letter arrived from the Prince Sultan Daniyal, reporting that (Malik) Ambar had collected his troops in Bidar, and had gained a victory over a party which had been sent to oppose him by Malik Barid. After exacting tribute from him, Malik-Ambar successfully attacked the Kutbu-l Mulki territories, and then proceeding towards Telingana, had besieged Mir Murtaza in Pathri. The Prince, therefore, to prevent his junction with the son of Shah 'Alī in Ahmadnagar, had detached the Khan-khanan against him, while Shaikh Abu-l Fazl was ordered against Raju.

PRINCE SALIM

It has already been related that His Highness the Prince Sultan Salim had set out against the Raja of Ajmir, attended by a train of followers countless as the stars. But as Akbar had now heard of the disturbances in Bengal, he had countermanded the Prince, and directed him to unite his forces with those of Raja Man Singh, to reduce these Eastern rebels, and that the Prince deferred his departure, and merely hunted towards Allahabad.

When the Emperor was at Akbarabad (Agra), the Prince wrote to request the honour of an audience, and proceeded as far as Etawa for the purpose, but here doubts were suggested to him by some ill-inclined persons, and he feared to advance any further. His Majesty was no sooner made aware of this circumstance, than he wrote to the Prince, that "if he were earnest in his wish to pay his respects, he ought to display his confidence by doing so alone, and dismiss his attendants to their jagirs, if, on the contrary, suspicion withheld him, he had better retire to Allahabad, there to reassure his heart, and repair to Court when he was able to do so with full trust and confidence." The prince, flamed at this kind yet disdainful communication, instantly despatched Mir Sadri Jahan, who was the chief justiciary of the Imperial dominions, and His Majesty's agent with the Prince, to his august father, charged with the most submissive apology, and referring to the Mir's own observation in testimony of his sense of duty and allegiance. He then set out towards Allahabad, and meanwhile an Imperial farman was issued, investing him with the government of Bengal and Orissa, and directing him to despatch his officers to take possession of those two provinces. Raja Man Singh was, at the same time, ordered to transfer the provinces, and to return to Court.

DEFEAT OF MALIK AMBAR

A splendid victory was gained by the Khan Khanan over Ambar. It had been reported by Mir Murtaza and Sher Khwaja that Ambar had been joined by Farhad with 2000 horse, and had strengthened himself in Nander. The Khan determined to send his own son, Mirza Irich, with a body of brave followers, against him. As fate had ordained the day of punishment for Ambar to approach, he was sufficiently bold to draw out his forces, and prepare for battle in the vicinity of Nander. Mirza Irich, chafing at his insolence, marshalled his brave forces and attacked him. The centre and left soon bore down their opponents, and if the right had in like manner gained the same honourable title to fame, it is most probable that the whole of the enemy would have been taken, and the sedition quelled at once. Even as it was, twenty elephants with all the enemy's equipage, were taken.

AFGHANS IN BENGAL

'Usman the Afghan trod in the path of rebellion, and crossing the Brahmaputra river, was in vain opposed by Baz Bahadur, the Imperial thanadar, who retired to Bhowal. Raja Man Singh no sooner heard of Baz Bahadur's retreat, than, marching the whole night, he joined him on the following morning, and attacking the enemy put him to flight, and took many guns and much spoil. The Raja having then again delivered the country to Baz Bahadur, returned to Dacca, but as the officer of the district now formed the idea of crossing the river and seizing upon the country of 'Isa, and Saripur and Bakrampur, the Afghans again assumed a posture of defiance, and defended the approaches both with guns and boats. As the contest continued for some time, the Raja sent a chosen body in advance, with orders to cross the river when they could get the opportunity. But the Afghans opened a discharge of artillery upon them from their boats, and many of the warriors were killed. The Raja now opportunely arrived in person, and with his men boldly crossing the river on elephants, the enemy, astonished at their daring, took to flight. The Raja drew not his rein till he had followed them to Tira and Mahwari. Then Ghazni, the chief of the latter place, submitted, and the Raja pushed on. He took Bakrampur and Saripur, and stationed trusty forces throughout the country. The Afghans then retreated to Sunarganw, while the Raja returned victorious to Dacca.

DEATH OF SHAIK ABU-L FAZI

As Shaikh Abu-l Fazal adorned the garment of the high consideration in which he was held with the embroidery of hearty fidelity, he had reported to His Majesty some of the youthful indiscretions of the Prince Salim Mirza, the heir apparent—forgetful that the high road to honour and distinction hath its dangers, and that the branch which wildly ventures to run crookedly must ever bear bitter fruit

To His Majesty's amiable disposition, therefore, his reports were not entirely acceptable, and, as this soon became current among all classes, Akbar summoned him to Court, and directed him to make over his retinue and command during his absence to his son 'Abdur Rahman Abu-l Fazi reached Sarai Banga,⁵³ two stages from Gwalior, on the 1st Shahryur. There Bai Singh Deo Bundela, anxious to obtain the favour of the Prince Sultan Salim, planted an ambuscade in his way. Abu-l Fazi's followers apprised him of the danger, and recommended him to retire for protection to Rai Rayan, and Raja Rai Singh, who were with 2000 horse at Antari, a distance of only two kos. But the Shaikh whose hour of death was at hand, and the gem of whose discrimination had therefore grown dull, only replied, "The fear of death is vain, for its period cannot be deferred. I have been raised by my gallantry from the position of being son of a darwesh to the rank of nobility, how then shall I basely seek shelter from another?" The Rajputs soon afterwards placed their rough hands upon his collar, and slew him with his attendants. His head was sent by Bai Singh Deo to the young Prince. His Majesty was much affected on hearing of his death, and he earnestly besought pardon for his sins from Creator. Orders were issued for bringing Bai Singh Deo to punishment.

⁵³According to Asad Beg, who had personal knowledge of the matter, the place of the murder was called "Sarai-Barar," and the murderer's name was Nar Singh.—See Wikaya i Asad Beg

PRINCE DANIYAI

Prince Daniyal, with the levity of youth, had forgotten the vow which he had made by the head of his august father to forsake the habit of drinking, and had again addicted himself to wine Akbar addressed to him a letter of exhortation, bidding him take warning by the fate of Prince Sultan Murad, and entreating him, if only out of regard to his earthly parent, to withdraw his hand from the impurity of this venomous and treacherous poison The Sultana Salima Begam took her departure for Allahabad, in order that she might by her influence bring to the Imperial Court the Prince Sultan Salim, who had been repeatedly reported to have thrown the veil of repentance over his offences He was therefore pressingly and graciously invited to the presence

BAR SINGH DEO

Bar Singh Deo, the murderer of Abu-l Fazl, had first been pursued by the Rai Rayan to Bhandar, and from thence to Irich, a strong fort on the river When the advanced party of the Imperial troops turned their conquering face against this place, he came out and drew up his troops to dispute the bank of the stream ⁵⁴ The Rai Rayan crossed and attacked, and drove him back again into the fort, which was then besieged by the royal forces The distress of the enemy increased, till the benighted culprit broke from the walls by night, and fled to the jungle His elephant was slain there, but he contrived under the darkness of the night, to effect his escape

FORTY-EIGHTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Reconciliation of Prince Salim

The Sultana Salima Begam, having interceded between His Majesty and the young Prince Salim, reconciled the monarch to the wonted exercise of paternal affection, while at the same time she also procured for Salim the pardon of Akbar's august mother. When the Prince approached the capital, that venerable matron proceeded some days' journey to meet him, and brought him to her own private abode. Even His Majesty, to conciliate his illustrious son, advanced several steps to receive him. After a short interval, His Majesty conferred on him the royal diadem, which is the main source of ornament to the Court and Sovereignty, and the chief light of the pomp of royalty.

⁵⁴*The Betwa*

DEFEAT OF THE MAGH RAJA

This shortsighted Raja, who had just now acquired the country of Bangu, and secured possession of the gold hoarded for many years, became elated with the extent of his treasures and the number of his elephants. He had succeeded by his wiles in bringing over Kand Rai, the zamindar of Bakrampur, who had been forcibly reduced by Man Singh. He then openly rebelled, and assembling an army at Sunarganw, laid siege to a fort in the vicinity. Sultan Kuli Khan the governor bravely defended himself, and eventually sallying forth, dispersed the besiegers. Ahmad, another rebel, then joined the Raja with his forces, and a second time summoned Sultan Kuli. Raja Man Singh, hearing of the increased numbers of the enemy, despatched a force under Ibrahim Atka, Raghu Das, and Dalpat Rai, to his assistance. These soon brought the Magh Raja and all his forces to action, for as victory ever attends the Imperial standards, they attacked him, regardless of the number of his boats and the strength of his artillery. A complete victory was gained. One hundred vessels, of different kinds, were taken, and the Raja was compelled to intrench himself in front of the Imperial troops, to provide safety against their attacks.

RAJA OF BANSWARRA

About the same period the Raja of Banswarra, who had excited a rebellion, was defeated by Mirza Shah Rukh, whose admirable zeal called him to the field, notwithstanding the infirm state of his health. The Raja was defeated after a short contest, his stronghold was taken, and himself driven to the hills. He next raised a party in Malwa, and the Mirza, thinking it more important to repress him than to seize his territory, promptly followed him thither. On this, the rebel immediately returned, and re-occupying his own country, increased in insolence. The roads were impassable in consequence of the rains, and the Mirza, being unable to move his troops, was compelled for the present to suspend the pursuit.

PRINCE SALIM

His Majesty had already once deputed Prince Salim to uproot the rebellious Rana, and the standards of victory had already overshadowed Udiipur. Another force had also been sent to reduce the hill country. But the Rana escaped to his fastnesses, and the consummation of this important affair was delayed. An order was now again issued that the Prince should a second time brace his courage to the destruction of this doomed infidel. But the inclinations of the young Prince were not heartily engaged in the enterprise. He reported that his troops were not prepared, and made extravagant demands, both for increased forces and treasure. Moreover, he intimated his wish, that if his exorbitant requests were not complied with, he might be allowed to return to his own jagir. His Majesty, accordingly, guessing the object of his conduct, directed that he might consider himself at liberty to return to Allahabad, and to present himself at Court whenever afterwards he chose to do so. The Prince accepted this permission, and marching on the 6th Azur, crossed the Jumna, near Muttra, and turned towards Allahabad.

BIJAPUR

Shortly after, the irrevocable commands were issued to Prince Sultan Danial and the Khan Khanan to march against Adil Khan of Bijapur, who was dilatory in the transmission of his tribute, and had otherwise shown himself refractory. The young Prince was ill, and unable to proceed himself but by the advice of his counsellors, he deputed Inayat-ullah to Bijapur, with a despatch calculated to excite both the hopes and fears of 'Adil Khan.

KAID RAI OF BENGAL

Raja Man Singh after defeating the Magh Raja, turned his attention toward Kaid Rai of Bengal, who had collected nearly 500 vessels of war, and had laid siege to Kilmak, the Imperial commander in Srinagar. Kilmak held out, till a body of troops was sent to his aid by the Raja. These finally overcame the enemy, and after a furious cannonade, took Kaid Rai prisoner, who died of his wounds soon after he was brought before the Raja.

ALMSHOUSES AND SARAIS

At this period alms-houses were directed to be established throughout the Imperial dominions, also caravanserais for travellers at every stage, where food was to be prepared and held in readiness at all times for the way worn traveller, who is usually too fatigued to be equal to the exertion of cooking his own repast.

IMPRISONMENT OF THE EMPEROR'S NEPHEW

Prince Kaikubad, son of Mirza Hakim, having contracted the pernicious habit of indulging in intoxicating drugs, was sent into confinement in the fort of Rantambhor, under the custody of Raja Jagannath, there to be kept until punishment and seclusion from corrupt society should work in him amendment.

FORTY-NINTH YEAR OF THE REIGN

BIJAPUR

'Adil Khan of Bijapur, being now wrought on by the exhortations of Mirza Sharfud din, the Imperial ambassador, to offer his allegiance to the State, Mirza Irich was the noble honoured with the charge of extorting both the tribute which he agreed to send, and the litter of his daughter, who was to be united to Prince Sultan Daniyal. That young prince was also prevailed on to proceed with 5000 horse to Ahmadnagar, to celebrate the rejoicings on the occasion of the nuptials.

RAJA MAN SINGH'S SISTER

The death of the sister of Raja Man Singh, who was the chief favourite in the harem of the Prince Sultan Salim, occurred at this time. This lady was ever ambitious of an ascendancy over the other inmates of the harem, and grew violent at the slightest opposition to her will. Having one day had a quarrel with one of her rivals, she took the opportunity of the Prince's absence at a hunting party, to swallow a large quantity of opium, preferring, in her fury, the draught of deadly poison to the sweet waters of life. She expired before the Prince, who was recalled from his excursion by the news of her illness, could arrive, and he remained for some days absorbed in grief for her loss.

PRINCE DANİYAL

It now became necessary to despatch to the Court of Sultan Daniyal Shaikh Abul Khair, brother of Abu-I Fazl, and equally devoted with that chief to the service of the Emperor, to endeavour by any means to bring the young Prince to Court, with the view there to force him to abstain from the ruinous course of inebriety which had now reduced him to the most debilitated condition. Reports arrived that the practice of indulgence in wine drinking, and of the excessive use of opium, had affected the health of the Prince Royal, Sultan Salim, and had made his temper so irritable and tyrannical, that the slightest offences were visited with the severest punishments, that pardon was never thought of, and that his adherents were struck dumb with terror. His Majesty, aware that a word of counsel spoken in season, would avail more than a thousand at a distance, determined to proceed to Allahabad, to attempt the reformation of the Prince.

DEATH OF THE EMPEROR'S MOTHER

(The progress of the Emperor to Allahabad) was arrested by the accounts which he received of the dangerous illness of his august mother, and his affectionate heart was overwhelmed with grief at her distressing state. On the 20th Shahryur she departed, leaving the world in grief. Akbar clad himself in the deepest mourning, shaved his head and beard, and avoided all ornament in his apparel. Her body was conveyed to Dehli. His Majesty himself placed his shoulder under the bier, and helped to bear it for several paces, and the same office was performed by the chief amirs of the State. Her remains were interred near to those of her illustrious husband.

THE MURDERER OF ABU-L FAZI

The abode of Bar Singh Deo, the murderer of Abu-l Fazl, had been several times attacked and plundered, but the culprit himself had still escaped the vengeful pursuit of Shaikh 'Abdu-r Rahman. Orders were now given for the reinforcement of that officer with as many of the Imperial troops as he might select as worthy, from their valour and conduct, to be partners in the work of retribution. Raja Bikramajit was also associated with him.

FIFTIETH YEAR OF THE REIGN

Capture of Urcha

Shaikh 'Abdur Rahman and Khwaja 'Abdu-lla reported that they had succeeded in taking the fort of Urcha,⁵⁵ one of the strongest in Hindustan, and that the rebel,

⁵⁵Eight miles from Jhansi

Bar Singh Deo, had been driven to hide himself like a snake among the wilds, to escape the pursuit of the Imperial warriors. Shortly afterwards another despatch was received from the same chiefs, stating that as the enemy had poisoned all the wells, and 1000 men had died of fever, they had been compelled to abandon Urcha as a place of residence.

DEATH OF PRINCE DANIYAL

Shall I talk of the changeableness of this world, or shall I relate the sad tale of this young branch of tender years, or shall I rather acquaint my pen with the evil which his own obstinacy and folly wrought upon himself? The fire of the wine cup extinguished the light of his natural abilities, and the lamp of his intellect was unable to burn through the abundance of this baneful liquid. The affectionate arguments of His Majesty were disregarded, till by degrees the fumes of wine sapped the strength and vigour of his constitution, and his trembling limbs lost their functions. The Khan-khanan and Khwaja Abu-l Hasan used their utmost endeavours, both in obedience to the Imperial orders, and the real affection they felt for him, to stop the supply of this deleterious liquor. They posted guards to prevent its introduction, but the base parasites who were about the Prince's person contrived to introduce the poison unperceived, sometimes concealing it in the barrels of muskets, and sometimes in their turbans. After forty days of illness, the young Prince died, at the age of thirty-three—an event which caused both friends and strangers to sit down in grief and mourning.

BAR SINGH DEO

It has been already related—that Bar Singh Deo took refuge in the wilds and forests. He was, nevertheless, pursued by Raja Jai Singh, who shot many of his followers, and at last wounded the blood-stained murderer, who, however, still contrived, though with blistered feet, to effect his escape

DEATH OF THE EMPEROR

On Monday, the 12th Aban, corresponding with the 20th Jumada-l awwal, 1014 Hīra (September, 1605), an illness insinuated itself into the frame of the Emperor, and he became indisposed. Hakim 'Alī who was the most skilful of physicians, was summoned to attend. After considering the symptoms, he refrained for eight days from administering medicine, under the hope that His Majesty's vigour of constitution would overcome the disease. On the ninth day, the debility and symptoms appeared to be aggravated, so the physician resorted to the remedies of his art, but they produced no good effect for ten days. The complaint in the bowels increased, and the limbs lost their power. It then became evident that recovery was hopeless, and that the collar of the world was in the clutches of the Fates

On the 9th Azar, corresponding with the night of Wednesday, 12th Jumada-l akhir (13th, October, 1605 A.D.), when the age of His Majesty had reached the period of sixty-five lunar years, he bade adieu to life, in the capital of Agra, and took his departure to the paradise of love. On the following day his sacred remains were borne by men of all ranks in stately and becoming pomp, to the grave, and were interred in the garden of Bihishtabad

CONCLUSION

Praise be to God, that this excellent work, the Akbar-nama, has been brought to an admirable and approved conclusion! The second volume, up to the forty-seventh year of the reign, is the composition of the most learned and intelligent Abu-l Fazl, son of Shaikh Mubarak, and from the forty-eighth year, after the death of the celebrated Shaikh, Inayatu-llā or Muhammad Salih, after duly preparing himself for the work of history, has thus brought it to an end

AKBAR-NAMA
OF
SHAIKH ILLAHDAD, FAIZI SIRHINDI

[Of this writer very little is known, except what we gather from the work before us. His father was Mulla 'Alī Sher, a learned man, among whose pupils was Nizamud dīn Ahmad, the author of the Tabakat-i Akbari. Shaikh Illahdad was a native of Sirhind, and held a madad ma'ash village in that district. He was attached to the service of Shaikh Farīd Bokhari, who held the office of Bakhshiu-l Mulk and he seems to have accompanied that nobleman on his various services. He tells us that it was by the express command of Shaikh Farīd that this history was written. He began it in the thirty-sixth year of his age, having up to that time "been greatly devoted to social pleasures and delights." This same Shaikh Farīd was also patron of another historian, Shaikh Nurul Hakk, whose work, the Zubdatu-t Tawarikh, will be noticed later.

The Akbar-nama of Shaikh Illahdad is a plain unambitious work, and has no pretensions to originality. It is based on the Tabakat-i Akbari, but the author sometimes prefers the narrative of Abu'l Fazl, and adapts that writer's florid and somewhat prolix descriptions to his sober and straightforward style. Thus the accounts of the murder of Atka Khan, and the conquest of Garha katanka are taken from Abu-l Fazl. On one subject only does he enter into more particular details—the services rendered by his patron, Shaikh Farīd Bokhari. With this exception, and the addition of scraps of poetry and some wonderful stories, the work is nothing more than a compilation from the Tabakat-i Akbari and the Akbar-nama of Abu-l Fazl. It ends with the latter work in 1010 H (1602 A D).

The author claims to have taken part in the compilation of the "Humayun Shahi" of Mihtar Jauhar, and upon the Emperor Akbar being informed of this fact, he expressed his approval, and his intention of employing him to turn some Hindi work into Persian

A few Extracts have been translated The first one by Ensign F Mackenzie, the remainder by the Editor

Sir H Elliot's copy of the Akbar-nama is an octavo volume of 453 pages 15 lines to a page]

EXTRACTS

An account of the manner in which the Khwaja Abdul Majid Isaf Khan conquered the country of Panna and Garha-katanla, by the eternal good fortune of His Majesty

It is not unknown to those who are acquainted with the events of this period that Khwaja 'Abdul Majid Harawi was originally a scribe who had during the reign of the late blessed monarch, been constantly employed in transacting the affairs of the household During His Majesty's fortunate reign, he had also held similar offices of trust Step by step he obtained promotion, and received the title of Asaf Khan A jagir was given him in the sarkar of Garha katanka, which is a very spacious country Katanka is a separate village near Garha In the year 970, and the eighth year of the reign, his experience induced him to desire to gain possession of the land of Panna which adjoined his own possessions He sent an urgent message to Raja Ram Chand, whose ancestors had always ruled that country, and with whom Ghazi Khan Tatar had taken refuge after his flight from the Court of the Asylum of the Universe He counselled him strongly for his own welfare to-become a subject of His Majesty, and pay him tribute. He also recommended him to send Ghazi Khan, who had been a rebel, and received shelter from him, to the Protector of the World.

⁵⁶Otherwise called Tazkiratu-l Wakiat No. XXXVIII Vol V p 136

⁵⁷In the MS the name is written "Patta"

Ram Chand's ill fortune and pride prevented him from being moved by these representations, and he made preparations for war. Asaf Khan, being free from apprehension, and trusting in the eternal success of His Majesty's arms, brought an army against him. Raja Ram Chand, aided by Ghazi Khan Tatar, and a vast multitude, like locusts and ants, also drew up in battle array. Both parties did their best, and fought valiantly, but, at last, Rani Chand was routed and Ghazi Khan and many others were put to the sword. Raja Ram Chand fled thence to the castle of Mandlaun, which is noted for being one of the strongest fortified places in Hindustan. Much plunder fell into the hands of the victorious troops. Shortly afterwards Raja Ram Chand, repenting of what he had done, by the assistance of several of the chief Rajas who were faithful subjects of the King, was admitted into the train of the submissive and obedient. A royal farman was despatched to the effect, that as Raja Ram Chand had taken the best course for his own good, and submitted himself, his country was not to be invaded. On the receipt of this order, Asaf Khan returned to his own jagir, and took measures for the reduction of Garha, which was near his own territory.

⁵⁶The chief place of that country is Chauragarh. The land contains 70,000 inhabited villages. It is bounded on one side by Malwa and the Dakhin, on another by Garha. It is a separate principality, governed by a Rani named Durgavati who was remarkable for her beauty and loveliness. Asaf Khan whose possessions her country bordered on, and whose people were constantly going to and fro, managed to make himself well acquaint-ted with its general condition, and the state of its revenues. He began to ravage and plunder the villages in its districts, waiting for an opportunity of taking more extreme measures. At last, in the year 971, in the ninth year of the reign, he valiantly set out with 10,000 horse and foot, purposing to take possession of the country. His valour made him look on this as a matter of easy accomplishment. The Rani, owing to her pride and confidence in her own skill and courage, attended to her own affairs, and utterly disregarded the fact that she had a neighbour whose valour had been proved on several occasions, particularly in the case of Baz Bahadur, who had attacked him with the Afghans of the tribe of Miyanah, and whom he had vanquished. She had always kept up a force of 20,000 horsemen but she was suddenly told that the valiant troops of His Majesty had arrived at Damuda, one of her chief towns, at a time when her troops were dispersed. She had only 500 men with her. Adhar, who was entrusted with the management of the whole business of that country, informed her how affairs stood. The Rani said, "This is through your stupidity. I have long ruled this country, and never acted in such a manner as to bring disgrace on myself. Now, from what you tell me, if the King were here in person, I would present myself before him, but now there is no remedy but war!" The Rani made four marches from that place, and found herself face to face with the Imperial army.

⁵⁶See supra

Asaf Khan had gone as far as Damuda with great speed, but he delayed there. The Rani thus had time to collect some 4000 men, and her courtiers recommended her to give battle, advising her, however, to post herself in some strong position until the arrival of more troops. The Rani agreed to this counsel, and retreated into the jungles and strong places, so that Asaf Khan became ignorant of her whereabouts. Asaf Khan turned back from that place, and on reaching Garha he took could from the field of battle to a place of safety, which they did. Whilst this was going on, so large a body of men went away from the Rani, that not more than 300 remained with her. Notwithstanding this she firmly maintained her ground, and encouraged her men to fight. Suddenly fate directed an arrow which struck her on the temple. This she courageously drew out herself, but its barb remained in the wound. This arrow was followed by another which wounded her in the neck, which she extracted in the same way, but fainted from excess of pain. When she came round she said to Adhar, who was in front of her, "I have always placed trust and confidence in you against a day like this, so that, in the event of my meeting with defeat you might not suffer me to fall into the hands of the enemy. Adhar had not the power to do what she required, so she drew out her dagger, and died a manly death. Very many of her confidential adherents loyally gave up their lives. By the favour of Almighty and the fortune of the King of Kings, a victory, the splendour of which exceeded all other victories, was obtained. A thousand elephants, and countless booty, fell into the hands of the victorious troops, and an extensive territory was added to His Majesty's dominions.

Asaf Khan, after the lapse of two months, proceeded towards Chauragarh. The Rani's son, who had gone thither from the field of battle, came out to oppose him, but after a short struggle, the army of the King gained possession of the fort. In it were found a great amount of gold, priceless jewels, gold and silver plate, and images of their divinities, together with other valuables and property, which had been collected there by the Rajas during many centuries, as is the custom of those people. All these fell into the hands of Asaf Khan, a hundred and one cooking pots, full of large and valuable gold coins, came into his possession. The performance of this notable action caused his pomp and dignity

Babakra, son of Mansur, son of Babakra, son of Umr Shaikh, son of Sahib Kiran Amir Timur. The mother of Sultan Mirza was a daughter of Sultan Husain Mirza ruler of Khurasan. This Sultan (Husain) Mirza brought up his grandson, Muhammad Sultan Mirza, under his own protection. When Sultan Mirza died, dissensions arose in his country, and Muhammad Sultan Mirza went and presented himself to the Emperor Babar, who treated him with great kindness. After the death of Babar, the Emperor Humayun kept up during his reign the same favour and patronage. Muhammad Sultan Mirza had two sons. One, Ulugh Mirza, met his death in a fight with the Hazaras. The other was named Shah Mirza. Ulugh Mirza left two sons, Sikandar Mirza and Muhammad Sultan Mirza. Upon the death of Ulugh Mirza, the Emperor Humayun charged himself with the education of his sons, and by his favour Sikandar Mirza received the title of Ulugh Mirza and Muhammad Sultan Mirza that of Shah Mirza. When the Emperor Akbar succeeded to the throne, Muhammad Sultan Mirza had grown up. The Emperor exempted him from military service, and assigned him the pargana of 'Azampur, in the sarkar of Sambal, for a maintenance. He had several sons. First, Ibrahim Husain Mirza, second, Muhammad Husain Mirza, third, Mas'ud Husain Mirza, fourth, 'Akil Husain Mirza. The Emperor conferred upon each of these a suitable jagir, and raised them to the rank of nobility. They attended in the train of His Majesty, and performed the duties of service. When the Emperor returned from his campaign against Jaunpur, they were at their jagirs in Sambal. At the time of the Emperor's march to Lahore against Mirza Hakim, the brothers Ulugh Mirza and Shah Mirza combined with their uncles (nephews?) Ibrahim Husain Mirza and Muhammad Husain Mirza, and breaking out into rebellion, ravaged several parganas. This was an old failing in the family. Ulugh Mirza and Shah Mirza, sons of Muhammad Sultan Mirza, rose in rebellion during the reign of Humayun, and did great damage. But on each occasion their offences were overlooked.

When these graceless men attacked the parganas, the jagirdars of those parts resisted them, and the Mirzas, being unable to withstand the force brought against them, made off to join Khan-zaman and Sikandar Khan. There also their intractable tempers stood in the way of anything like union, so they turned back, with the intention of making an inroad into the Doab, and went as far as the pargana of Nim-Kahal. Here Yar Shahi, the sister's son of Haji Khan Sistani, jagirdar of that district, gave them battle, but although he made a good fight, he was defeated, and great booty fell into the hands of the Mirzas. They continued their course, plundering as far as Dehli. Tatar Khan, the governor of Dehli, put the fort in a state of defence and Mun'im Khan moved up from Agra to oppose them. Unable to resist the forces brought against them, they hastened off to Malwa, which was in a defenceless state. At the town of Sonpat, they fell in with Mir Mu'izzu-l Mulk who was proceeding to the Panjab, and plundered his baggage. They then proceeded to Malwa, and took possession of that country. Kadam Khan, brother of Maghrib Khan Dakhini, was in Hindia, and Muhammad Husain Mirza laid siege to the place. After a time, he killed Kadam Khan, and got possession of Hindia. When intelligence of these doings reached the Emperor at Lahore, he gave orders for arresting Muhammad Sultan Mirza at Azampur and for keeping him a prisoner in the fort of Bayana.

In the same year, 947 H, the Emperor having proved victorious over 'Ali Kuli Khan-zaman and Bahadur Khan, returned to Agra, and his victorious army had hardly taken breath, when the news came of the descent of the Mirzas upon Malwa. The Emperor immediately went off thither. When he reached Gagraun, he did not deem it necessary to prosecute a design, which might as well be carried out by his officers, so he appointed Shahabud din Ahmad Khan, Shah Bidagh Khan, and some others, to act in the province of Mandu. As these nobles came near to Ujjain, they learned that the Mirzas, having heard of the approach of the Emperor, had met together and gone off to Changiz Khan, the ruler of Gujarat. So these commanders, by the grace of God, and the good fortune of the Emperor, obtained possession of the province without opposition or fighting.

In the year 975, when the Emperor had sent his forces to besiege the fort of Rantambhor, he received intelligence that the Mirzas had fled from Changiz Khan, and having come back into Malwa, had laid siege to Ujjain. So he sent against them Kalij Khan and some other amirs who had been named for service at Rantambhor. When these amirs approached Sironj, they were joined by Shahabud din Ahmad Khan, the governor of that sarkar, and Shah Bidagh Khan, governor of Sirangpur. The Mirzas hearing of this imposing force, raised the siege of Ujjain, and turned towards Mandu. The garrison being thus relieved, came out, and having joined the army, the united forces went in pursuit of the rebels. They fled from Mandu to the Nerbadda, and lost many men in making the passage of that river. Just about this time, Jhajar Khan Habshi assassinated Changiz Khan, the ruler of Gujarat, in the tirpauliya. When the Mirzas were informed of this event, they thought the disturbances in Gujarat opened a favourable field for them, so they proceeded thither, and the Imperial amirs returned to their jagirs or to Court, according to orders. The Mirzas, having obtained possession of Champanir, marched against Broach and laid siege to the fortress. After a time, they killed by treachery Rumi Khan, who held the fort, and each of them brought a portion of the territories of Gujarat into his possession Ibrahim Husain held Baroda and the surrounding territories Muhammad Husain got Surat and its dependencies, and Shah Mirza held Champanir, with its dependent districts

CAMPAIGN IN THE SIWALIK

Armaments had been several times sent under different amirs of distinction to effect the subjugation of Jammu, Ramgarh, and other places, but this difficult enterprise had never been satisfactorily accomplished So, on the 10th Muharram, 1003, the Emperor sent Shaikh Farid Bakhshu-l Mulk, with several other amirs and a considerable force, to effect the conquest He had great confidence in the ability and resolution of the Bakhshi The force marched to the Siwalik hills, and the Bakhshi resolved to begin by attacking Jammu, one of the strongest forts in that country, which had once been reduced after considerable resistance by Salim Khan Sur The Raja made signs of resistance, and it was resolved to attack him before the army proceeded to occupy the territories of the rebels in other directions Husain Beg and some other officers were accordingly sent against him When the Raja and the zamindars heard of the approach of the Imperial forces, they were greatly alarmed, and surrendered the fort of Jammu After placing a garrison in the place, the Bakhshi marched against the fort of Ramgarh, which he took by assault, and placed in the custody of the men of Nawab Zain Khan Koka Husain Beg now returned and joined the main force

Another force was now sent under Payinda Kakshal, to receive the submission of such Rajas and zamindars as were willing to pay their allegiance, and to coerce those who resisted The army then proceeded towards Jasruna and Lakshanpur, and the Rajas and zamindars, who had long been independent, submitted and paid their revenue On reaching Samba, Bhabu, the Raja of Jasruna, and Balidar, the zamindar of Lakhanpur, came in. This Bhabu had been the leader of the rebels, and the great promoter of the strife. Next day Suraj Singh, son of Basu, the Raja of Mu, came in, and made his allegiance, and he was placed in charge of Husain Beg Shakih 'Umar, until it should be determined by the Emperor how the parganas of Samba and Jasruna should be disposed of. Two kos from Samba a fort was built. Muhammad Khan Turkoman was sent forward to take charge of Lakhanpur.

The army next proceeded to the village of Aliya, where Bhabu was, and there encamped. This is a strong place, surrounded on all sides by jungle so dense, that it was difficult to pass through it. Hither the rebels and fugitives fled and hid, deeming themselves safe from all pursuit. Shaikh Farid stayed for some days at that village, and gave orders for clearing away the jungle by the axe and by fire. The soldiers were engaged in the work for several days, but were unable to clear away more than a road of twenty or thirty gaz wide. Several of the old trees which were fit for building purposes were cut down and sent to Lahore for use in the government buildings. Bhabu before mentioned, had been the chief and most active of the rebels, and he had done an immense deal of harm. A royal order had been given, that no effort should be spared to capture him. Now that he was in the hands of the army, it was determined to send him to the Emperor in charge of 'Ali Muhammad.

When the army reached Jasruna, the native place of Bhabu, his sons and brethren and friends gathered together, and took up a strong position at a small castle on a hill. This hill was covered with jungle from top to bottom with only one narrow way, along which one or two horsemen might pass. On each side of this road there was a wall, with loopholes through which muskets might be fired, and arrows shot, upon strangers and foes, to prevent their approach. At the bottom of the hill, on the level ground, there was a cultivated tract, in which there was a fort, with moats Shaikh Farid, when he perceived these hostile preparations, determined to capture the place, and punish the rebels. He first sent forward Husain Beg to attack the lower fort. By great exertion the moat was filled, the gates burst open, and the fort was taken. Several of the assailants were killed by wounds from gun shots and arrows. Then the troops entered the jungle to attack the upper fort. The enemy hotly disputed the passage through the jungle with their muskets and bows. But the valiant soldiers returned the fire, and pressed on till they reached the gate of the fort. Then they set fire to the place, and the rebels fled for refuge into the jungle. All the buildings and crops were burnt.

Husain Beg halted here, and sent intelligence of his success to Shaikh Farid. An answer was returned, directing him to fortify the place and stay there the night, or to leave a detachment, and himself rejoin the main force. It was late in the day, the army was two kos distant, the way through the jungle was narrow and difficult, and the returning force might be attacked at great disadvantage, so Husain Beg resolved to rest for the night, and to make his way back in the morning. All night long the enemy harassed them from all parts of the jungle with arrows, but according to the plan agreed upon, each man sat behind his breastwork (morchal) with his shield over his head, never moving or making a noise. The night was thus passed amid a constant rain of arrows, but in the morning the forces made their way through the jungle, and effected their junction safely. Husain Beg obtained great praise for his gallantry, and rewards in m'am, money, and robes were bestowed upon the officers and soldiers.

Having left Husain Beg there with a garrison, the army proceeded towards Lakhampur. The Raja came out to meet it. The pargana was given to Muhammad Khan Turkoman, and a sufficient garrison was placed in the fort. Then the army crossed the Ravi by a ford, and proceeded to the pargana of Pathan, next day it marched to Mu, a pargana under the authority of Basu. At this time Basu was at Court, but his son had at the first come forward and accompanied the army. He was now told that he ought to seize the opportunity for sending a suitable offering in acknowledgment of the country having been graciously confirmed to him. The son of Basu sent two vakils to invite the Bakhshi to his home, a fort on the top of a hill to receive the tribute. So the chief men of the army proceeded with an escort to Mu, which is a very strong fort. Excepting some cultivated land immediately joining the fort, the whole hill is covered with impenetrable jungle. The road through is very narrow, and in places strong gates are erected across it. At the foot of the hill there is also cultivated land, and around it there are stone walls and deep ditches. The country round is exceedingly pleasant, the gardens are full of fruit trees, and there are plenty of running streams. Basu's residence was a fine extensive building. The place was visited and examined, and after Basu's vakils had discharged the duties of hospitality, the tribute was brought forth consisting of valuable horses and fine cloths. The other territories of the neighbourhood, which had been held by rebellious Rajas and zamindars, were granted to jagirdars as tankhuah.

The army then proceeded to Gwalior, which is also a strong fort belonging to a different Raja, who came out to meet the army and show his loyalty. The Rani of Nagarkot, whose son was at the Imperial Court, sent her vakil to pay her respects. On every side the rebels were compelled to submit, and show their obedience. All the country which had been in the hands of the rebels between Jammu and Nagarkot was reduced, and the Rajas and zamindars made their submission, or received merited punishment. In fact, the country was subjugated in a manner which it had never been before

The affairs of the clan (jama'at) of the Jasuwalas, who are zamindars with a (common) army, now had to be settled. But when they heard of the approach of the royal army, and of the reduction of the territories of the zamindars, all hope of successful resistance was beaten out of them, and they made humble submission.

Intelligence now arrived that Kazi Hasan had been appointed to relieve Shaikh Farid. The reason of this was, that the Emperor greatly valued the services of the Shaikh, and when he learned that the country had been reduced, and there remained but little to require his presence there, he appointed Kazi Hasan, who had formerly seen service and gained experience in the hills under the son of Kalij Khan, to go and relieve the Shaikh, and to finish what yet remained to be done in concert with the other nobles in the army. Shaikh Farid Bakhshi was to return to Court. When the Kazi arrived, the Bakhshi represented that there still remained some work to be done, and it seemed advisable for him to remain a few days and accomplish his work, after which he would proceed to Court. It might be that things which were easy for him might become difficult after his departure. But the Kazi did not assent to this, and urged immediate submission to the royal command. So, at the beginning of the month of Dec, the Bakhshi started, and travelling express by way of Desoha and Batala, he reached Lahore in three days, and having paid his respects to the Emperor, received great honours.

About this time Khwaja Nizamud din Ahmad Bakhshi, the author of the Tabakat-i Akbar-shahi, died, being nearly forty eight years of age, on the 22nd Safar, 1003 H, and the thirty-ninth year of the reign.

On the 22nd Rabi'ul akhır, Nawab ı 'Azam Khan returned from Mecca, and was graciously received by His Majesty. His son, Mirza 'Abdulla, was with him, and

He also received many marks of the royal favour. On the 27th of the month Koba died at Lahore. On the 1st Raman sam Asaf Khan who had been sent to Kashmir having performed his mission returned to Court. He accomplished the journey from Kashmir in three days. At the end of Jumady sam, despatches arrived from the ramp of the fort of Swat after an arduous siege. Many of the defenders were slain and great spoil was gained. Mir Mirjam Bhalai, one of the bravest men in the army had taken a distinguished part in the siege and was richly rewarded.

THIRTY SEVEN YEAR OF THE REIGN

The thirty seventh year began on the 9th Rajab and is celebrated as usual.

At this time Muzaffar Husam ruler of Kandhar who had submitted to the authority of the Imperial throne wrote to the Emperor that he would surrender Kandhar to any one whom the Emperor might appoint. Shah Beg Khan Kalabi had been ordered to proceed thither. He had not yet reached the place but in the month of Shaban intelligence was brought of his arrival there and of Muzaffar Husam having delivered the place into his hands. Muzaffar then repaired with all his family and followers to the Imperial Court having received as a present from Shah Beg 20,000 rupees in cash 600 camels several elephants and a great supply of different kind of tents. When he was at four fas distance from Lahore the Emperor sent Bahadur Shakh Farid to meet him and in the month of Zil hijja he received him and appointed a suitable place for his abode (Banquets given and offerings made at the Nau roz).

In the month of Safar the Emperor went to pay a visit to Shakh Izzat who was on his death bed. Soon after he got back to the palace word was brought that the Shaikh was dead. Shaikh Faizi was a man of great talents, and fond of the society of the learned. In his early days he and the author of this work had some connexion through using the same takhallus for their writings.

On the 15th Zil ka'da the King went out on a stag hunt. A stag made a rush upon him, and wounded him in the thigh with his horns. There was no one close by to save him, so he was knocked down. Men then came and caught the stag. The Emperor had received a severe wound. It was closed up by the surgeons, but after a few days it swelled and gave him such great pain that he was obliged to keep to his couch for several days, in the end it came all well, and his recovery was celebrated with great rejoicings.

VICTORIES IN THE DAKHIN

There are three distinct States in the Dakhin. The Nizamu-l Mulkiya, 'Adil Khaniya, and Kutbu-l Mulkiya. The settled rule among them was, that if a foreign army entered their country, they united their forces and fought, notwithstanding the dissensions and quarrels they had among themselves. It was also the rule, that when their forces were united, Nizamu-l Mulk commanded the centre, 'Adil Khan the right, and Kutbu-l Mulk the left. This rule was now observed, and an immense force had been collected. Some severe fighting had gone on, and the enemy had lost nearly 1,000 men, who fell fighting bravely. On the Imperial side, also, Raja Ali Khan, ruler of Asir and Burhanpur, who had accompanied the army, was slain. Ram Chandar Kachhwaha was wounded, and lay a whole night among the dead, and plunderers cut off his ears, for the sake of the pearls which he wore in them. In the first day's action, fighting went on from mid-day to the third hour of evening, when the enemy fell back to his camp. In the evening and morning of the next day Khan Khanan put his army in motion against the enemy, and when he approached the enemy came out boldly to meet him and the battle began. A fierce elephant rushed from the enemy's line and charging upon the Imperial army the elephants turned and fled before him. He then charged the line of soldiers but they made a way for him to pass through. After he passed right through the line Khan Khanan delivered his attack upon the enemy. In a short time he beat back a large body of them with considerable slaughter made many prisoners and gained a complete victory.

(Great joy at the royal palace — Account of the Emperor's journey to Kashmir, with description of Srinagar and other places)

On the 29th Rabi-us-suni 1006 Prince Rustam son of Prince Shah Mirad died in the tenth year of his age. His mother was sister of Khwaja Azam.

On the 5th Rajab died Abdullah Khan Uzbek ruler of the whole of Mawarannahr, Turkistan, Badakhshan a great part of Khurasan, Sistan, Ghor, Ghorjistan, &c. He was a bold courageous ruler and no other descendant of Chingiz Khan had such an extensive dominion. He reigned forty-two years.

On the 13th Shaban the new year (11) of the Hahi began.

DEATH OF MIR'SUM KABULI

At this time (Zil hijra, 1007) intelligence arrived of the death of Mir'sum Kabuli and only a few days afterwards the death was reported of 'Isa Khan, a chief of Bengal, with whom he had taken refuge.

CONQUEST OF THE DAKHIN

The Emperor Akbar had subjected to his rule the whole wide expanse of Hindustan, with the exception of a portion of the Dakhin, the rulers of which had, never theless, sent in former years representatives and presents to the Imperial throne. But some of these rulers had since failed in duly discharging their obligations, and had thus wounded the pride of the Emperor. Prince Shah Murad, Khan-khanan, and other amirs had been sent to effect the conquest of the country. The Prince went to that country, and distinguished himself by his services. Other amirs were afterwards sent, who fought bravely, and subjugated a considerable portion of the country. The work of conquest was still progressing, when it entered the heart of Prince Salim⁶¹ that he would proceed thither to support the amirs, and to accomplish the reduction of the remainder of the country, so that diversities of religion might be swept away, and that the whole country might repose in peace under the Imperial rule. For five or six years the conquest had been retarded by the bickerings of the amirs, and so he resolved to proceed from Lahore to the Imperial presence at Agra, there to obtain information of the true state of affairs, because that place was nearer to the scene of action, and after due consultation, to proceed thither in person should it seem necessary.

When intelligence arrived of the death of Prince Shah Murad, Prince Daniyal was sent thither, but the Emperor not feeling at ease upon the state of affairs in the Dakhin, resolved to proceed in that direction, by making a hunting excursion to Malwa. His intention was to send a strong reinforcement to Prince Daniyal, under Bahadur, son of Raja 'Alī of Khandesh, and to rest awhile in Malwa till events took a favourable turn. The Emperor accordingly left Agra and on the 21st of the month, after showing great honour and favour to Khan-khanan, he sent him on in advance. On the 7th Rabi' u-s sani, the Emperor reached Dholpur. The river Chambal was crossed by fords, and His Majesty went over on an elephant. On the 17th he reached the fort of Gwalior. On the 29th Jumada s sani, he passed through Sironj, and on the 1st Rajab the royal camp was pitched between Kaliyada and Ujjain. This city Ujjain is one of the most ancient in Hindustan, and contains many relics of antiquity. Kaliyada is the name of one of the most delightful places in the world. Here the Emperor rested for awhile, expecting that Bahadur Khan son of Raja Ali Khan of Khandesh, would come to wait upon him.

⁶¹He is already called by his subsequent regal name "Shah Jahangir"

Raja Ali of Khandesh had been slain fighting bravely under Khan-khanan against the Dakhinis, and it was expected that his son would now come forward to give his services to the Imperial army, in the hope of revenging his father's fall, and of gaining the Imperial favour. Even while the Emperor was encamped at Ujjain, some intimation was received about his intentions, and he now sent an envoy to the Emperor, charged with many excuses and foolish evasions. Hereupon His Majesty, in his great kindness, sent Miran Sadr-i Jahan, to Khandesh, to ascertain the exact state of affairs, and to remove any doubts which might have crept into the mind of Bahadur Khan.

The ambassador proceeded to Khandesh, and ascertained that when Bahadur Khan succeeded Raja 'Ali Khan, he was a prisoner in the fort of Asir. For it was the established custom among the rulers of Khandesh that the reigning potentate kept his sons, brothers, and other relations in confinement, to guard against attempts upon the throne, so these unhappy persons, with their wives and families, passed all their lives in confinement. Bahadur Khan had passed nearly thirty years in prison, and knew nothing whatever of the ways of the world, and the business of government. When he came out of prison, and the title of ruler devolved upon him, he plunged recklessly into dissipation. No trace of the tact and nobility which had distinguished Raja 'Ali Khan was to be found in him. Unmindful of his obligations and obedience to the Imperial throne, he showed no gratitude and sent no tribute, nor did his craven spirit entertain one thought of avenging his father. When this became known to the Emperor, he remembered the loyalty and devotion of the late Raja, and sent Miran Sadi-i Jahan to give good counsel to the young Prince.

Miran proceeded to Asir. Bahadur Khan received him at first with great respect and honour, and acknowledged the allegiance and duty he owed to the Emperor. The envoy on his side gave him good counsel and advice, and endeavoured to excite in him a spirit of loyalty. But fate was against the young ruler, he paid but little heed to good counsel, and persisted in his own perverse conduct. Sometimes he said he would go to see the Emperor, at others, that suspicions had been aroused in his mind by people's talk, which would not allow him to make this visit at present, but he promised to send his son with suitable offerings, if the Emperor would graciously direct him to do so. After awhile, when all the dependents of the Imperial throne should have been confirmed in their places, and he should be able to throw off his feeling of shame, he would proceed in person to pay his respects to the Emperor. These excuses proceeded either from his wavering disposition, or from a settled design to act treacherously. When Miran, the envoy, found that his representations had no effect upon Bahadur, he communicated the result to the Emperor. This roused great anger in the breast of the Emperor, and was the cause of his sending Shaikh Farid Bokhari to Khandesh.

On the 14th Sha'ban, while the Imperial camp was at Dhar, Shaikh Farid Bakhshu-l Mulk received orders to lead a considerable force against the fort of Asir. His instructions were to re-assure and advise Bahadur Khan.

If he proved tractable, he was to be brought to the presence of the Emperor, if not the Bakhshi was to invest the fort of Asir and reduce it with all possible speed. The Imperial officers were eager to proceed on this service partly out of zeal in the service of the Emperor partly from the wish to serve under the Bakhshi. Among those who accompanied him were _____ and a large number whose names are too numerous to recount.

With this select force the Bakhshi crossed the Nerbaddi and sought to get information about the enemy. He then learned that the forces of Bahadur Khan were under the command of Sadat Khan son-in-law of the late Rājā Mir Khan the greatest and the most trusted of all his servants. He had been sent towards Sultanpur and Nandurbar to make a diversion against the Imperial forces in that quarter. It was resolved to detach a force to watch this party while the remainder marched through Khandesh. On arriving at Gharkol, a humble and submissive letter was brought from Bahadur Khan, recounting the services of his ancestors and offering to send his son with suitable offerings to the Emperor. He also made excuses for his conduct and solicited the kind intercession of Shirkh Iarid to avert the consequences of his faults. The Shirkh sent this letter to the Emperor and waited for an answer. The Emperor sent a gracious reply, offering to forgive his transgressions and to receive him into favour if he would hasten to pay his allegiance.

Marching forwards, the army passed over the summit of Sabalgarh, and arrived on the confines of Khandesh. Miran Sadr-i Jahan had previously advised that the force should be sent to Burhanpur, lest its advance upon Asir should drive Bahadur Khan to desperation. But when this opinion was represented to the Emperor, he the same day gave orders that no attention was to be paid to it, that the army was not to go to Burhanpur, but was to march direct to Asir, and invest the place.

dog. This unusual exhibition of courage greatly impressed him, and he thought that the land where such a sight could be seen must be fertile in courage and daring, so he resolved to take up his abode there. He expressed his wish to the zamindar of the place, but it was refused. Afterwards he seized an opportunity of seeking assistance from the king of Delhi, and having collected some of his brethren (tribesmen²), he overpowered that zamindar, and took possession of the village. He extended his power over other villages around, and in the end he was master of several parganas, and commander of an armed force.

When he died his authority descended to his grandson, who saw the value that a fortress would be as a place of safety for his family and dependents. Asir, which is situated on the top of a hill, was at that time an inhabited place. He contrived by various stratagems to obtain this place from the zamindar who held it, and fortified it strongly. He then assumed the name of ruler, and at length the whole country of Khandesh, about 150 kos in length, and 50 in breadth, more or less, came under his sway. These rulers acted so wisely and carefully that the kings of Delhi did not interfere with them. Upon the Government descending to Raja 'Alī Khan, he showed himself to be a man of great administrative powers, and it is probable that no one of the dynasty had been his equal in intelligence and ability. People of neighbouring and distant countries had been induced by his just and generous rule to take up their abode in his country. Among the best proofs of his intelligence was his loyalty to the Imperial throne, his obedience, and the magnificence of his offerings, in all which he excelled the other princes of the region.

His successor, Bahadur Khan, had none of his ability, and advice was thrown away upon him. The line was drawing to a close, and fortune had averted her face. Shaikh Farid invested the fort, and reported the fact to the Emperor, who sent him reinforcements, and himself passed over the Nerbadda on his way to superintend the siege. On the 4th Ramazan the Naurozi Sultani occurred, and His Majesty halted three days to celebrate the festival. The march of the Imperial force was then resumed.

Letters now arrived from Nawab 'Allami Shaikh Abu-l Fazl, who was coming from the Dakhin with the elephants and valuable effects of the late Prince, and who announced his arrival at Burhanpur. He had received orders to join Shaikh Farid, and to concert measures with him for the punishment of the recusant Prince. On the 4th Farwardin the army marched, and encamped at two kos distance from the fort of Asir, because on that side there was no ground nearer the fort which was fit for a camp. Baz Bahadur Uzbek and Karabeg were sent forward immediately to select positions for the trenches and for the encampment of the besiegers.

On their return, they reported that they had never seen in any country a fort like this, for however long an army might press the siege, nothing but the extraordinary good fortune of the Emperor could effect its capture. Old soldiers, and men who had travelled into distant lands,—men who had seen the fortresses of Iran and Turan, of Rum, Europe, and of the whole habitable world, had never beheld the equal of this. It is situated on a high and strong hill, and three smaller hills, each having a fort, stand around it, like a halo round the moon. The ways of entrance and exit were difficult to discover.⁶² Near it there was no other hill commanding it, and no way of approach. All round was level ground, and there were no trees or jungle to serve as cover. All the time the country had been held by the dynasty, each prince as he succeeded did his best to keep the place in repair to add to its strength or to increase its stores. It was impossible to conceive a stronger fortress or one more amply supplied with artillery, warlike stores and provisions. There were 500 mans of opium Ilharshani weight, in its stores. Were the fortress placed upon level ground its reduction would be difficult but such a hill such a well-secured fortress, and such artillery were not to be found in any one place on the face of the earth.

⁶²*Abul Fazl also gives a description of the fortress, and descants upon its great strength*

After the capture of the fortress accounts were taken of the munitions. Of pieces of artillery (zarb-zan), small and great, there were more than 1,300, besides some which were disused. The balls varied in weight from nearly two mans down to a gir or a half gir. There were great numbers of mortars (Hulkadan), and also many manjaniks each of which threw stones of 1,000 or 2,000 mans. On every bastion there were large iron cauldrons, in each of which twenty or thirty mans of oil could be boiled and poured down upon the assailants in case of assault. No account was taken of the muskets. Of provisions of all sorts, wines, medicines, aromatic roots, and of everything required for the use of man, there was vast abundance. When, after a protracted siege of eleven months, the place fell into the hands of the Imperial army, the quantities of grain, oil, etc., which remained, after some thousands of men had been fed (during the siege), seemed as if the stores had never been touched. The stores of ammunition were such, that thousands of mans were left, although the quantity consumed had been enormous. For throughout the siege a constant firing was kept up night and day, with object and without object, so that in the dark nights of the rainy season no man dared to raise his head, and a demon even would not move about. There were large chambers full of powder. There were no springs of water in the fortress, but there were two or three immense reservoirs, in which the (rain) water was collected and stored from year to year, and amply sufficed for the requirements of the garrison. In the dwelling of each officer of importance there was a separate reservoir, containing a sufficient supply of pure water for his household. Nor had all this preparation been made for the occasion, it had been kept up from the foundation of the fortress. The rulers of the country had incessantly cared for the strengthening and provisioning of the fort, more especially in respect of artillery. The revenues of several parganas were specially and separately assigned to keep up the supply of artillery, so that the officers of the department had independent sources for maintaining its efficiency. The population in the fortress was like that of a city, for it was full of men of every kind. After the surrender, the inhabitants came out, and there was a continuous throng night and day for a week.

The houses of the chiefs were fine lofty buildings, and there were open spaces, gardens and fountains. In the walls of the fort, which were of great thickness, chambers and rooms were constructed for the officers of the artillery, where, during all seasons, they could live in comfort, and keep up a fire of cannon and musketry. The fortress has one gate, and outside this gate there is another fort called Kamargarh, the walls of which are joined on both sides to the great fort. This was looked upon as an outwork and was held by inferior ranks of men, such as musketeers and archers. Below this fort, but still on an elevated spot, is another fort called Malgarh,⁶³ which also is very strong. In comparison with the fortress it seems at the bottom of the earth, but compared with the surface of the ground, it looks half-way up to the sky. This being the most advanced of the works great care had been taken to strengthen it with guns and other implements. Below this was an inhabited place called Iakhari as large as a city. In short, the fortress is one of the wonders of the world and it is impossible to convey an idea of it to any one who has not seen it.

⁶³*Abu-l Fazl says that information was obtained from one of the garrison of a secret way into this outwork, and that it was taken on a dark rainy night by a force under his command—an achievement which got him a great name—Akbar-nama, vol. iii. p. 857, see Blochmann's Ain-i Akbari, vol. 1 p. xxvii*

Shaikh Farid after collecting all available information about the fortress wrote a description to the Emperor, and devoted himself to devising a plan for its capture. As the actual strength of the place was not fully known to the Emperor anxious men represented its reduction as being an easy matter and thus vexed him. A letter at length arrived from the camp, announcing the Emperor's intention to come and examine into matters with his own eyes. About the same time also Shaikh Abu-l Fazl arrived from Burhanpur and encamped three or four kos from Asir, as he was hastening to join the Emperor. He sent to inform Shaikh Farid of his presence and the Shaikh set off to see him. He had gone but a little way when he remembered that Bahadur had promised to see him next day, so he stopped and returned to camp. Next day Bahadur came down from the fort to meet the Shaikh, and his spies busied themselves in observing all they could. It so happened that on that day a letter was coming from the Emperor, and the Shaikh mounted to go and meet it. But just as he was starting, his spies brought him word that the cavalcade was approaching. Although Shaikh Farid had with him a large force of horse and foot, musketeers, rocket-men, and elephants, the matter seemed to him important, and he was apprehensive that there was some design against him. So he halted where he was, and sent a messenger to Shaikh Abu-l Fazl, to say that he should not come to see him that day, as circumstances prevented him Shaikh Farid sent messengers to re-assure Bahadur, and he came with a large escort to the Shaikh's tent, and had an interview with him. Every argument was used to induce him to make his submission to the Emperor, and as he had no answer to give, he merely shook his head. At length he returned to his old excuse of being afraid, and rejecting all advice, he returned to the fortress. Some men have maintained that the Shaikh ought to have made him prisoner at this meeting, but resort to subterfuge and want of faith and truth never prove successful. Besides this, Bahadur had with him a force sufficient to resist the weak army of the Shaikh. Next day the Shaikh went to visit Shaikh Abu-l Fazl at his camp, three or four kos from the fortress, and the meeting with Bahadur was discussed, and a report sent off to the Emperor.

All expectation of Bahadur's submission being now given up, Abul Fazl, who had waited to see the result of the interview, proceeded to join the Emperor. Having first directed his attention to the occupation of the country, the closing of the roads, the way into and out of the fortress, the forming of the trenches, and other matters connected with the siege, Shaikh Farid sent a detachment to Burhanpur, to arrest the officers of Bahadur, and to occupy the city. But on arriving there, it was found that the governor had already made his submission to the Emperor. Some experienced officers thought it desirable that a force should be stationed there, and Shaikh Farid finally decided that 1,000 horse should be stationed between Burhanpur and Asir. This force took up a position about two kos from the fortress, and cut off all communication between it and the city. Next day Shaikh Abul Barakat, brother of Shaikh Abu-l Fazl, joined the besieging force with the elephants and artillery which had been sent under his command. The army now removed to a more favourable position, and it was resolved to form trenches in every suitable place.

siege the fort and to close the roads and entrances. Another letter was received from Bahadur Khan, to which Shukh I and replied. But Bahadur Khan trusted in the strength of his fort and thought that its height and strength were such that no mortal force could take it.

One day when the commander rode towards the fort to examine it, a large gun was fired at him. It is related that some of the battlements of the tower on which it was placed fell down, and the gun itself also fell. This was received as a good omen by the Imperial army. Mir Sadra Jahan who had returned to the Emperor, now came back charged with an Imperial message. Next day Miran Sayid went round and looked after many things in the construction of the trenches, so that they might afford protection to the men and enable them to stay there day and night. The Emperor's mind was intent upon this matter. Letters constantly arrived from him with instructions and urgent directions. Every day some one of his officers came to inspect and report upon the progress of the siege.

Having received orders to wait upon the Emperor, Shukh I and proceeded on the 18th to the royal camp at Barga, seven or eight fos from Asir. He was received very kindly, and he related all the details of the siege. He remained there the next day, and on the following day the Imperial camp moved towards Asir. On the 21st Buyatidin or 25th Ramazan it reached the city of Benhampur, and the Emperor took up his abode in the palace of the old rulers. Intent upon the siege, he then marched on, attended by numerous amirs, and arrived under the fort on the 3rd Shawwal. Shukh I and then received orders to attend to his own duties as Bellah, and to wait upon His Majesty, and to appoint the other amirs to the direction of the trenches, so that he might be ready upon emergency, to lead a force in any direction.

The trenches were then allotted to the different amirs. The first to Khan-i 'Azam, another to Nawab Asaf Khan, another to Mirza Jani Beg of Tatta. A fourth trench he placed in charge of his brethren and adherents, and having well examined it, he gave it into their charge, while he himself proceeded with a chosen force to attend upon the Emperor. It was impossible to dig mines or construct sabats, so the men in each trench endeavoured to bring the investment as close as possible. At the end of the month, 'Azam Khan, and Asaf Khan reported that the garrison kept up a fire from different kinds of guns all night and day, with object and without object, necessary and unnecessary, and that the besiegers endured it with great bravery.

In the early days of Zi-l ka'da, Bahadur sent out of the fortress sixty-four elephants, along with his mother and son, to the Emperor, and begged forgiveness of this offences. The Emperor replied, that if he desired pardon, he must come out at once to make submission, and trust to the Emperor's mercy. On the 16th Zi-l hijja a sortie was made, in which many of the garrison lost their lives in a desperate struggle. When they were driven back, a little hill called Koriya fell into the hands of the besiegers. This eminence is so close to the fortress as to have command over it. The besiegers then saw that by occupying this commanding position, and by getting possession of another which was strongly fortified, they might overawe the garrison. The former masters of the place had seen the importance of this position, and had scarp'd the rock so that no one could climb up. After hard fighting, this position was carried.

On the 21st Safar news arrived of the capture of Ahmadnagar on the 18th. The fortress had long been defended by Chand Bai, the sister of Nizamul Mulk, and when formerly besieged, dissensions among the Imperial amirs averted its capture. Prince Daniyal, assisted by some of the great amirs, had now taken it by assault. The siege had now been carried on for nearly six months and a constant fire had been kept up without effect. Khankhanan thought that mining must be resorted to and the other amirs concurring with him, a mine was formed. It was charged with 180 mans of gunpowder and was exploded on the 20th Shahrivar in the 15th year of the reign. A bastion was blown up with seventy or eighty gaz of the wall. Khankhanan, Raja Jagannath and the other amirs, exerted themselves to incite their troops and gave orders that the troops were to rush in and finish the work directly after the explosion. This order was duly executed, and a force under Yusuf Khan scaled the wall by means of a mound⁶⁴ in another place. The assailants pressed on, and after a severe fight in which 1000 of the besiegers fell the fortress was captured. The grandson of Nizamu-l-Mulk was taken prisoner and carried to the Emperor.

A few days after Bahadur sent Sadat Khan and Shaikh Pir Muhammad Husain, two of his chief men to the Emperor, with ten elephants and an entreaty for forgiveness. Two days afterwards Shaikh Pir Muhammad was sent back into the fortress, and Sadat Khan was kept as the guest of Shaikh Farid. The escort which had come out with him was ordered to return with Pir Muhammad, but the men, about a hundred in number, declared that they would not return into the fortress and become prisoners (asir) in Asir. Permission to remain was given to those who could give some bail that they would not run away, otherwise they were to be put in confinement. In the end some found the required bail, and some went back into the fortress.

Among the causes which brought about the surrender of the fortress was the impurity of the atmosphere,

⁶⁴*Khalak rezī*, see supra

his orders to assist in the subjugation of the Dakhn. Khan Khanan was sent to Ahmadnagar, and the general conquest of the Dakhn was committed to him. The Emperor went in and inspected the fortress. All the treasures and effects of Bahadur Khan which had been collected by his ancestors during two hundred years were brought out and the wives and women of Bahadur two hundred in number, were presented. The Emperor stayed in the place three days and then proceeded to Burhanpur.

On the 28th Shawwal all the country of the Dakhn, Birar, Khândesh, Malwa and Gujarat were placed under the rule of Prince Daniyal.

THE END